DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the areas of the Borough of Poole which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

Poole's earliest Charter was granted in 1248 and in 1568 it was made a County of a Town by Elizabeth I; since then the Council has appointed a Sheriff annually.

The Borough is renowned for its great natural beauty which it is the Council's policy to preserve and enhance. This has been achieved despite development of the town as a medium-growth area in the Strategic Plan for the South East. For many years the average increase in population has been 2,000 annually. The residential districts of the borough comprise Alderney, Branksome, Branksome Park, Broadstone, Creekmoor, Canford Cliffs, Canford Magna, Hamworthy, Lilliput, Merley, Newtown, Oakdale, Parkstone, Sandbanks and Wallisdown. The Council has laid out a private residential estate of over 200 acres at South Canford Heath and has purchased a further 513 acres for comprehensive development to meet housing needs in the next few years.

Poole Harbour and Poole Bay are world-renowned for their excellent yachting and the Royal Motor Yacht Club is situate in the harbour as well as five other yacht clubs. The bathing beaches from Branksome Dene Chine to Sandbanks contain some of the most popular sandy beaches on the south coast. The Council maintains many parks and open spaces and owns the freehold of a holiday caravan estate of 60 acres providing sites for over 1,000 caravans.

Considerable industrial expansion has taken place during recent years and, in addition to the traditional industries of pottery and brick manufacturing there are industries concerned with many types of engineering, electronics and automation, pharmaceutical products and chemicals, caravan production and food manufacturing. The Council has laid out an industrial estate of 50 acres to assist expanding local industries and to relocate non-conforming industries from residential areas. In addition, further areas are being made available for industrial development.

Phase I of a central area shopping and commercial re-development has been completed. This includes a new central library and a £200,000 sports centre. The Council plans to build a £2m complex comprising a 1,500-seat concert hall, 650-seat theatre, art gallery and craft rooms for multi-arts use. Further extension of the shopping and hotel development is planned. Traffic-free shopping conditions have been created in High Street. Commercial expansion includes an office block of 375,000 square feet for Barclays Bank International Ltd. for a decentralized head office in the town centre. Further office development, both in the town centre and elsewhere, is expected to start shortly. The whole of the town centre comprising 175 acres is included in approved comprehensive development area maps.

The diversion of all sewage from coastal outfalls to an extended sewage disposal works was completed in November 1973. A refuse pulverization plant is in operation, the product being used for reclaiming land for open spaces and future roads. The Council is the port health authority.

Mayoral annual allowance: £2,350.

The city comprises the areas of Portsmouth CB which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

Earliest known Charter—1194. Created a County Borough in 1888.

Portsmouth, which incorporates the seaside resort of Southsea, lies on the north shore of the Solent, overlooking Spithead and the Isle of Wight. The seafront stretches in an unbroken line for some 4½ miles and the Council activities include the running of a licensed restaurant, 13 cafés along the front, caravan and camping sites, sun huts, etc., a covered swimming pool and two open pools and various other entertainment and recreational undertakings. There are two piers, one privately-owned and the second council-owned, but leased to private enterprise.

The City is the premier naval port of the Commonwealth and is rich in historical tradition. One of the country's greatest showpieces, HMS Victory, is berthed in the world's oldest dry dock in Portsmouth's Royal Dockyard and valuable historical features include Southsea Castle (Council owned and opened as a Museum of Military History) and Round Tower and Point Battery (features of the fortifications of Old Portsmouth, restored by the Council).

The civic headquarters is the magnificent Guildhall. Destroyed by enemy action in 1941, the Guildhall was completely rebuilt internally while the imposing external facade was largely retained, and the building was opened by HM the Queen in 1959. The public parts of the Guildhall house one of the country's finest concert and conference halls, with seating for 1,993 and the most modern facilities.

The new Civic Offices in Guildhall Square have recently been completed and these will house those Council Departments at present accommodated in premises scattered throughout the city.

Other projects recently completed include the Continental Ferry Port with car ferry services to Cherbourg and St. Malo.

Portsmouth has been granted the retention of City status in the new local government structure and the title of Lord Mayor. This was conferred on the Chief Magistrate of the city in 1928.

Mayoral annual allowance: £4,000.

The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

Preston CB, Fulwood UD, Preston RD (part).

Preston is an ancient town, being a borough by prescription and having been granted a Charter in 1179. There is good evidence that an earlier Charter was granted in 1100. The ancient Guild Merchant is celebrated every 20 years as a result of the Charter of 1179, and the last celebration was held in 1972. H.M. Queen granted, in 1974, a Charter conferring on the district the status of borough and preserving the powers, privileges etc. of earlier Charters including the right to continue the celebration of the Guild Merchant.

Preston is a progressive industrial town with a wide range of industries. Considerable redevelopment of the town centre is taking place; a central bus station and car park, a retail market and car park and a new civic hall having recently been completed. Preston lies within the area of the designated Central Lancashire New Town and a Development Corporation has been appointed and is now fully operational. It is estimated that the new town will have a population of over 420,000 by 2001.

Preston has a port of some significance, even though it is some 16 miles from the open sea. The river Ribble has been made navigable enabling vessels of a nett tonnage of approximately 3,500 tons to use the port. The Ribble Navigation and Preston Dock Undertaking is owned by the Council. The Council is the Port Health Authority.

The Council makes an allowance of £1,500 per annum to the Mayor.

The following county council and regional water authority functions are carried out by the borough council on an agency basis: Consumer Protection; Highways; Libraries; Refuse Disposal; Building Maintenance—under the Local Authorities (Goods and Services) Act, 1970; Agreement under the Water Act, 1973.

The borough comprises the area of Reading CB which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

Reading's recorded history commences with the account in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle of the Borough's occupation by the invading Danes in 871. The Domesday Book AD 1086 shows Reading to be a royal borough, but it was soon to be dominated by the Abbot of Reading. Reading Abbey was founded by Henry I in 1121. The first royal charter was granted to the Merchant Guild in 1253 by Henry III. Henry VII's charter of 1487 is the first to mention the office of mayor, a title which has certainly been used from at least 1302. The town received its first charter of incorporation in 1542 from Henry VIII who had dissolved the Abbey in 1539. Archbishop William Laud, who was born in Reading and educated at Reading School, greatly aided the Corporation in obtaining a charter from Charles I in 1638 giving further privileges. This document remained the governing charter of the Borough until the Municipal Corporations Act 1835. Reading received County Borough status in 1888. The County Borough boundaries were extended in 1911 to include Caversham and part of Tilehurst. The results of a further review are awaited.

The Transport Department operates 131 (majority one-man operated) motor buses. The passenger vehicles run over 3,200,000 miles and carry approximately 27 million passengers per year.

Reading has many fine public parks and recreation grounds occupying a total area of nearly 500 acres. The Forbury Gardens, laid out in the forecourt of Reading Abbey, and the Abbey Ruins, are near the centre of the town. The Thameside Promenade, stretching for a mile above Caversham Bridge, offers good views of the Thames. Most of the parks have cricket, football and hockey pitches and many offer facilities for bowls and tennis. Approximately 160 acres of allotments are also provided by the Council.

The Central Swimming Pool was opened in 1967. Facilities comprise a 33-metre swimming pool, a 12′ 6″ diving pool and a teaching pool. It is used by approximately 362,507 people per year.

In 1973, the first dual-provision sports centre in Reading was opened at Meadway Comprehensive School. Facilities consist of a 120 × 60 feet sports hall, a 20 metre swimming pool, 2 squash courts, an all-weather football pitch with floodlighting facilities, together with cafeteria and licensed bar facilities. A second dual-provision sports centre at Ashmead Comprehensive School in South Reading is also proposed and additional facilities are planned in other parts of the town.

The Central Library, in Blagrave Street, houses reference, adult and junior lending, local history, music and gramophone libraries. The reference library provides a commercial and information service.

The Art Gallery and Museum are located in Blagrave Street and contain an extensive collection of Roman remains from Silchester.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,500.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the area of the former Reigate MB, and Banstead UD and the new Parishes of Horley and Salfords and Sidlow which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

The major part of the borough, which stretches from the North Downs to the Weald, lies in the Green Belt and is within easy reach of London and the South Coast. The borough contains extensive areas of open space and parkland and the major area lies within the Green Belt. The controlled open spaces include (within the Reigate locality) Colley Hill, Queens Park, Redhill and Reigate Commons, Reigate Park, Reigate Heath and the Castle Grounds; and (within the locality of Banstead) Banstead Downs, Park Downs, Banstead Heath, Nork Park and Banstead Wood.

Throughout the borough there are ample facilities for football, cricket, bowls, tennis, golf, riding and other recreational pursuits.

A Charter of Incorporation was granted to the former Reigate Council in 1863, and the Reigate and Banstead District Council petitioned successfully for a Grant of Incorporation under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1972.

The village communities of Banstead, Chipstead, Hooley, Kingswood, Tadworth, Walton-on-the-Hill, Woodmansterne and the Nork, Tattenham and Preston areas provide good residential facilities in pleasant rural settings. The village of Merstham and the residential area surrounding it, the towns of Horley, Reigate and Redhill and the areas of Woodhatch and South Park, though predominantly of an urban residential nature, are well provided with delightful natural open spaces, and are situated at the foot of the North Downs.

Comprehensive re-development proposals have been agreed for the town centre of Redhill which will ultimately form a pedestrian precinct, while the council will continue to endeavour to preserve the special character of the ancient town of Reigate known in the Domesday Book as 'Cherchefelle'.

Mayoral annual allowance: £3,675.

St. Austell-with-Fowey MB, Newquay UD, St. Austell RD.

Located in mid-Cornwall, the Borough extends from the Atlantic to the Channel coasts of the county, with two principal industries in tourism and china clay.

The main tourist industry is concentrated on the coastal regions. Newquay, on the north coast is one of the five most popular resorts in the British Isles, catering for some 1,000,000 visitors annually. Reputed to have the finest coastline and beaches in Europe, it is also one of Europe's leading surfing centres.

The south coast offers the attractive alternatives of the smaller and more intimate resort of Fowey—renowned for its sailing activity—or Mevagissey, the old Cornish fishing village. Between these two popular resorts there are a number of beaches and coves clustered around the bay of St. Austell.

The administrative headquarters of the authority are based at the expanding town of St. Austell which is also the centre of the British china clay industry. The areas inland from the two coasts contain the bulk of the nation's china clay deposits, which are the subject of extensive mineral workings.

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

In the administrative county of Glamorgan—
- the urban district of Caerphilly except the Taff's Well ward;
- the urban district of Gelligaer except the Bedlinog ward;
- in the rural district of Cardiff, the parishes of Llanfedw, Rhydygwern, Rudry and Van.

In the administrative county of Monmouthshire—
- the urban districts of Bedwas and Machen and Rhymney;
- in the urban district of Bedwellty, the Aberbargoed, Cwmsyfiog, New Tredegar and Phillipstown wards.

Reorganization has resulted in the almost total unification of the Rhymney Valley from its northernmost reaches to Machen. A small enclave in the vicinity of Pengam remains part of the county of Gwent and of the district of Islwyn.

Historically, the earliest known remains are at Gelligaer Village, the site of a Roman camp which was partly excavated in 1913 and which is intended eventually to be re-excavated and left open.

Dominating the town of Caerphilly is the famous moated 13th-century castle covering an area of 30 acres, second in size only to Windsor Castle. The banqueting hall has been restored and is available for use by civic and cultural organizations.

Coal mining continues to be the main employer of labour in the valley, although there are an ever-increasing number of diversified industries throughout the area, especially in the south around Caerphilly and Bedwas, in the centre near Ystrad Mynach and in the north around Rhymney.

Derelict land reclamation schemes are removing the eyesores of past industry and are providing new industrial sites as well as improving the environment. Exceedingly fine panoramic views are to be had throughout the district from vantage points on the surrounding hillsides.

Parks and playing fields abound, providing facilities for almost all sports. Bargoed has a high standard cinder running track where Welsh A.A.A. meetings are held. Indoor recreational facilities are available at Caerphilly, Bargoed, Bedwas, New Tredegar and Ystrad Mynach.

The Rhymney Valley authority operates a public transport department serving 26 routes within the area, and connecting with the principal towns including the city of Cardiff; 67 vehicles run nearly 2 million miles involving some 9½ million passenger journeys annually.

The authority is also responsible for nearly 12,000 council houses.

Chairman's annual allowance: £2,000.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district of Runnymede, situated in the north west of Surrey, covers an area in excess of 19,000 acres and includes Addlestone, New Haw, Ottershaw, Lyne, Longcross, Englefield Green, Wentworth Estate (including the golf courses), the village of Thorpe as well as the towns of Chertsey and Egham. Also included are the meadows of Runnymede, the commons of Englefield Green, St. Ann's Hill, Cooper's Hill which overlooks Runnymede, and a large area of Windsor Great Park which includes Fort Belvedere, the former residence of the Duke of Windsor. Historically, the district centres on the foundation of the Benedictine Abbey of St. Peter, traditionally dated at AD 666. In later years Egham formed an important place of call on the main coach route to the west and the extension of the railway to Chertsey in 1848 aided development of the town as a river resort. The boundary of the district tends to follow the line of the Thames, much of which is administered by the Thames Conservancy, and although the district is situated so close to London it still retains much of its rural character and on fine weekends the river and other public open spaces are popular attractions which bring many visitors to the area.

To many, the name Runnymede conjures up the story of King John's fight with the barons which culminated with the signing of the Magna Carta, in 1215, and which concludes with these words:—

"Given by our hand in the meadow which is called Runnymede between Windsor and Staines on the 15th day of June in the Seventeenth year of Our Reign".

Close by the spot traditionally regarded as the scene of that event are found the Runnymede Air Forces Memorial which was unveiled on 17th October, 1953, and the Kennedy Memorial which was erected by public subscription in memory of the late President of the United States of America on land donated by the Crown.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:
West Bridgford UD, Basford RD (that part south of the River Trent), Bingham RD.

The Rushcliffe district includes almost all of the county of Nottinghamshire, south of the river Trent. Whilst it is a mainly agricultural part of the county, it can also take pride in a modern coal mine at Cotgrave and one of the country's largest power stations at Ratcliffe on Soar. The headquarters of the new district is at West Bridgford which contains some of the choicest housing to be found in the county.

The new district is particularly fortunate in its recreational facilities, which include not only the internationally famous Trent Bridge Cricket Ground, but also the Forest Football Ground, and the international Water Sports Centre at Holme Pierrepont. The district can also boast of the county's first Joint Sports Centre at Bingham, and another leisure centre is under construction at the Rushcliffe comprehensive school at West Bridgford.

The Council pays particular attention to good relations with the public and an Information Centre has been provided at West Bridgford. The Council also works closely with its Parish Councils particularly on planning and recreational matters.

The new Authority has inherited an interesting area which is already accepted as one of the most desirable parts of the east Midlands. The Council is well equipped to develop its enormous potential to the full.

DEFINITION OF AREA

Aldershot MB, Farnborough UD.

The district is pleasantly situated in north-east Hampshire, close to the borders of Surrey and Berkshire and conveniently served by road and rail to London and the South Coast.

Rushmoor is the new name for an area well known not only in Britain, but internationally because it comprises Aldershot, with its military camp established in 1854, and Farnborough, long noted as the birthplace of aeronautical research and development. In recent years there has been rapid expansion in housing development, light industrial estates and town centre re-development schemes, the last-named including new shopping centres, multi-storey car parks and office development. To achieve balance, civic buildings, sports and recreational complexes also form part of the expansion to the extent that the area, although urban in character, is well served with recreation grounds, parks and open spaces which, added to its convenient location, will ensure that Rushmoor remains an attractive residential area, with excellent communications both internally and with outlying areas.

Many visitors are attracted to the district each year for the Aldershot Horse Show and military pageants, and to the International Air Show at Farnborough. More locally, the area welcomes visitors from an area larger than its own to the recently completed Prince's Hall where a wide range of productions are staged, and to the new recreation centre. The Council's aim is to expand existing facilities of a recreational nature and examples of projects now in hand include, in addition to the foregoing, a municipal executive-type golf course, joint community schemes with military and education authorities and the development of open-air sports complexes.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,250.

The area of some 125 square miles includes two market towns; the old county town of Oakham which has a Norman Castle Hall, Parish Church, and is the home of the famous Oakham School and the town of Uppingham, being the home of the equally famous Uppingham School and containing numerous attractive Ironstone buildings. There are, in addition, more than 50 villages within the District, most of which have an abundance of buildings constructed in the local Iron or limestone, roofed with thatch or Collyweston stone slate.

Empingham Reservoir covers an area of more than 3,000 acres in the centre of the District and is likely to become a popular recreational centre with extensive sailing, fishing, nature study and picnic facilities.

DEFINITION OF AREA
The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:
The county borough of St. Helens. In the administrative county of Lancaster:
- the urban districts of Haydock, Newton-le-Willows and Rainford;
- the urban district of Billinge-and-Winstanley except the areas in Greater Manchester;
- in the urban district of Ashton-in-Makerfield, the South ward;
- in the rural district of Whiston, the parishes of Eccleston, Rainhill and Windle, and the parish of Bold, except the area in Cheshire.

The borough is heavily industrialized, broken by green belt areas which surrounded the previously independent administrations. The main industry is glass, and within the bounds of the new area is Haydock Park Racecourse and Billinge Beacon. To the north are areas of good agricultural land of pleasing landscape value. There is easy access to the M6, and south of the borough is the M62 motorway.

DEFINITION OF AREA
The city comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:
The county borough of Salford.
In the administrative county of Lancaster:
the boroughs of Eccles and Swinton and Pendlebury;
the urban districts of Irlam and Worsley.

Salford is situated in the south-east of the Metropolitan County of Greater Manchester. It plays many roles and may be said to be the epitome of Lancashire life. The scene shifts gradually from the pastoral beauty of Worsley to the busy, industrial complexes of the area around Manchester Docks. The area is rich in places of interest. The Peel Park Museum and Art Gallery houses the largest public collection of Lowry paintings and a street scene showing relics from the nineteenth century; Monks Hall Museum has examples of machine tools and a steam hammer from the Industrial Revolution made by James Nasmyth, the famous engineer; the banks of the Bridgewater Canal in Worsley are lined with beautiful timbered buildings of which the court house and Worsley Old Hall are notable, the latter containing a restaurant in which a Jacobean banquet can be enjoyed; the award-winning Queensmere reclamation scheme, in which five acres of near derelict land were transformed into a pleasant recreational area, can be seen in Swinton; in the heart of Salford can be found the recently renovated Ordsall Hall, a half-timbered fourteenth-century building which in the past was the home of one of Lancashire's oldest families, the Radcliffes; Eccles Parish Church dates from the thirteenth century and is said to be on a site consecrated by St. Patrick in early Christian times; the new University of Salford is quickly becoming established as one of the finest in the country.

DEFINITION OF AREA

Bridgwater MB, Burnham-on-Sea UD, Axbridge RD (part), Bridgwater RD.

The District of Sedgemoor is situated in the north of the county of Somerset, with some twenty-five miles of its northern boundary comprising sea coast formed with the Bristol Channel and the western approaches of the Severn estuary. Motorway M5 traverses the district from the north-east, within 20 miles of Bristol and thence to the north or, by link with M4, to London, to its western boundary with access to the holiday areas of North Somerset, Devon, Dorset and Cornwall.

Sedgemoor is rich in tradition particularly—as its name recalls—with regard to the events leading to the suppression of the Monmouth rebellion in the 17th century when the ill-fated rebel forces were routed at the Battle of Sedgemoor, a short distance east of Bridgwater.

With the Quantock, Polden and Mendip Hills, including the famous Cheddar Gorge, Sedgemoor is well blessed with scenic amenities; in fact, the district as a whole presents a blend and range of all the features desirable in a balanced pattern of environment. Country pursuits and farming interests are catered for by two thriving weekly markets at Bridgwater and Highbridge with the added attraction of the famous annual Bridgwater Fair.

Burnham-on-Sea provides excellent seaside holiday resort amenities—particularly sailing.

Industry and commerce are strongly represented in Bridgwater where several nationally reputed companies are based, whilst Highbridge also has a thriving industrial area.

Two rivers pass through the district, the Parrett and the Brue, both of which reach the sea at Burnham-on-Sea.

The control of the navigation of the River Parrett from Bridgwater to the river mouth at Burnham-on-Sea, and of its eastern and western sea approaches, was originally vested in the Borough Council of Bridgwater and this function has passed to Sedgemoor District Council, who employ a full-time Harbourmaster to control the entry and passage of coastal and foreign vessels in the river.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

The county boroughs of Bootle and Southport.
In the administrative county of Lancaster:
- the borough of Crosby;
- the urban districts of Formby and Litherland;
- in the rural district of West Lancashire, the parishes of Aintree, Ince Blundell, Maghull, Melling, Netherton, Sefton and Thornton, so much of the parish of Altcar as lies west of the line for the time being of the centre of the Downholland Brook, and so much of the parish of Lydiate as lies south of the line for the time being of the centre of the Lydiate Brook, the north channel being taken where the Brook divides.

The Metropolitan Borough comprises an Irish Sea littoral extending from the River Mersey to the river Ribble. The southern portion is chiefly industrial and commercial in character, and includes the major docks of Merseyside (with the new Royal Seaforth Dock and Container Base), multi-storey office precincts (mainly occupied by government departments), National Giro headquarters and an ultra-modern 2-level shopping centre.

To the north lie the popular Merseyside dormitory areas, near to an easily accessible seashore, 160 acres of which have recently been developed as a marina and recreational area.

At its northerly extremity is the well known seaside resort of Southport, where the holiday facilities include 6 golf courses, open air baths, pleasure beach, theatres, cinemas and a modern holiday camp.

A few miles inland is a rich and extensive agricultural area in a pleasant rural atmosphere.

The area is well served by road and electric rail services which provide rapid access to central Liverpool.

DEFINITION OF AREA

Selby UD, Derwent RD, Hemsworth RD (part), Osgoldcross RD (part), Selby RD, Tadcaster RD (part).

The district is largely an agricultural area, containing many picturesque villages and some of the finest farm land in the country. Selby, which is the largest single township, is renowned for its splendid 900-year-old abbey. It is a busy port, where ships are built, and has a variety of industries. It is an important road and rail junction. Tadcaster is well known as a major centre of the brewing industry, and the palace of the Archbishop of York is at Bishopthorpe.

The University of York is located at Heslington, towards the eastern boundary of the district.

The area is traversed by three major rivers, the Ouse, Derwent and Wharfe, and is bounded by the Aire on the south.

The Secretary of State for the Environment has granted planning permission subject to stringent conditions, for the development of the new Selby coalfield, which will cover 100 square miles and will consist of five interconnected shaft mines and a drift mine, from which the coal produced at all the mines will be transported by rail to power stations in the locality. The coalfield, when fully developed towards 1980, is expected to make a major contribution to the national economy.

It is expected that the Council's new headquarters building in Selby, now under construction at a cost of approaching £1,000,000 will be ready for occupation in April/May, 1977.

Sevenoaks UD, Sevenoaks RD, Dartford RD (part).

The area of the District lies within easy commuting distance from London with an excellent train service offering the advantages of both city and country to its residents.

The terrain is undulating and frequently wooded, varying in height from approximately 100 feet above sea level to approximately 800 feet above sea level. Although the area is mainly rural, the three local centres of Swanley in the north, Edenbridge in the west and Sevenoaks in the south, provide all the amenities of local country towns without in any way losing their identity with the past.

The Pilgrims Way, in parts a highway and parts a footpath, crosses the area in the north—one of the many pillars of the bridge of time across the centuries. The area is rich in well-preserved evidence of historical associations, but, nevertheless, the old and the new blend happily together.

Water supplies are good from the Rivers Darenth, Eden and Medway and from wells. The climate is dry and bracing.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the areas of Shrewsbury MB and Atcham RD which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

Shrewsbury is the County Town of Salop and has been specially favoured with many Charters, the earliest existing one being a Charter of Richard I dated 11th November 1189. The town has a wealth of timber framed and Georgian houses, steep narrow streets and little alleys gathered for protection within a great loop of the River Severn. The original castle (which doubtless replaced the Saxon fortress) was built by Roger de Montgomery under the order of William the Conqueror and was rebuilt and enlarged by Edward II. A large modern Cattle Market lies north of the town and is supported by a recently built Abattoir, and in the town centre there is an up-to-date general market and shopping complex and modern swimming baths built to international standard. Constructed to service the town is a modern Crematorium, Sewage Works and a Works Depot and a link road at Telford way.

The rural area covers some 210 square miles and is typical English countryside at its best. The Stiperstones, the Long Mynd, Wenlock Edge and the Wrekin are ancient hills surrounding Shrewsbury. Buildwas Abbey and the ruins of Haughmond Abbey are of notable historic interest and there are many historic mansions in this countryside and pretty groups of cottages of mellowed brick or plaster with half timbering or built of local sandstone. Many of the parish churches show a growth of architecture from Norman days and contain much of interest. North of Shrewsbury lies the site of the Battle of Shrewsbury (1403) where Henry IV defeated the rebellious Barons of the Welsh marches and Hotspur was killed. Nearly 2,000 years ago, the Romans constructed a branch of their famous Watling Street (the A49 South now runs parallel).

DEFINITION OF AREA

Slough MB, Eton RD (that part of the parish of Wexham in the new county of Berkshire; the Britwell ward of the parish of Burnham).

Slough is pleasantly and conveniently situated on the main London to Bath road, and on the main Western Region railway line, 20 miles west of London. There are over 31,000 dwellings in the town, which has grown enormously during the past 20 years. There are 137 miles of roads, including part of the M4, three main railway stations, and London Airport is five miles distant. Various redevelopment schemes for the town centre and elsewhere are now complete. An entertainments and conference centre, The Fulcrum, comprising a 420-seat theatre and two multi-purpose halls (seating 1,200 and 250) will open in November 1976. Among various large holdings, the council owns 33 recreation and sports grounds of an area of approximately 600 acres, the chief of which is Upton Court Park containing 180 acres. The Salt Hill Pleasure Ground of 33½ acres and the Lascelles Playing Fields of 31 acres have pavilions, cafés and up-to-date dressing accommodation. Bowling greens, cricket pitches, tennis courts (hard and grass), hockey, association and rugby football pitches, and play leadership activities are provided. The council's heated open-air swimming pool is in a garden setting of some 8 acres with extensive sunbathing lawns, children's splash pool, play area, etc. A comprehensive Indoor Sports Centre, including heated pools, is partially completed and managed jointly with two adjoining Districts.

The town's refuse is treated at a pulverizing plant and then disposed of by tipping. The council owns 10 sites of permanent allotments with a total area of 95·6 acres. A substantial programme of major works, including the provision of 300 dwellings per year, is proceeding. A Crematorium adjacent to the Cemetery serves the district. Within the town there lies the great manufacturing centre known as the Trading Estate, comprising an area of over 600 acres of level land and accommodating approximately 300 factories. The Trading Estate owes its phenomenal development to Slough's commanding and accessible location. As a trading estate it was the first of its kind to be established in the country, and has since been used as a model for others in this country and overseas.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The city comprises the areas of Southampton CB which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

Southampton's natural advantages have attracted settlement from the earliest times. Roman and Saxon ports were succeeded by the mediaeval town from which has developed the present County Borough. Its first charter was granted by Henry II and Southampton was created a County of itself in 1447. On 24th February 1964, Her Majesty the Queen raised the Town and County of the Town to the title and dignity of a City.

Southampton is now Britain's second largest port with a fast-growing container handling base and expanding passenger ferry traffic to France and Spain. The world's largest passenger vessels use Southampton as a cruise base and port of call. The local authority is very much alive to its responsibilities to the port and co-operates to the greatest possible degree with the port authority.

The city's geographical position, together with its historical interest and first-class shopping facilties, make it a natural regional centre and attraction to visitors. The Council pursues an active policy of developing leisure services and is making a conscious effort to attract more tourists to the city. The Art Gallery and the four museums are just a few of the attractions operated by the Leisure Services Department.

Southampton is noted for its attractive, well-planned streets, and clean appearance. The Avenue is considered among the most noble approaches to any city. Public open spaces total over 1,000 acres in extent, and comprise 9 per cent of the city's area. The Sports Centre has been described as the finest of its kind in the Commonwealth. 267 acres in extent, it includes 2 golf courses, 7 football pitches, 5 hockey pitches, 5 cricket pitches, 12 tennis courts, 2 bowling greens, and crazy golf, putting courses, 2 cycling and running tracks, children's and canoe lake and play area, paddling pool and children's corner. Another valuable asset is The Common covering an area of 328 acres in the central district of the city, and comprising mostly natural parkland. There are several attractive parks and facilities for tennis, football, cricket, bowls, hockey, etc., in the many recreation grounds. Riverside Park has an eighteen-hole pitch and putt course, and nearby Mansbridge Reservoir is used by local anglers. The Weston Shore is also a popular amenity. The Council administers the allotments in the City, which comprise 175 acres.

The Council organizes annually a show on the Common in July which includes horticultural displays, dairy festival, dog show, horse jumping and many other attractions catering for all the family. The show attracts considerable support from a wide area. The Council also organizes an annual one-day Regatta in June.

The Council manages the Central Swimming Baths which have a seating capacity for 902 spectators, and the open-air Lido, which is one of the largest in the country, is open during the summer months.

The Corporation operates a transport service, comprising about 198 vehicles over a total route of 68 miles, and also the Itchen floating bridge.

Housing statistics: Present housing stock—23,318; houses and flats built pre-1939—3,884; temporary bungalows—22; post-war—22,433; acquired properties—821; sold properties—3,842.

Mayoral annual allowance: £3,450.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974: Dunstable MB, Leighton-Linslade UD and Luton RD.

The district is the most southern part of Bedfordshire, bounded by Buckinghamshire to the west and Hertfordshire and Luton to the south and east. It comprises 80 square miles of mainly rural countryside, with the Chilterns escarpment rising sharply from a terrain which is predominantly gently rolling farmland.

On the western boundary of the district are Leighton Buzzard and Linslade, adjoining townships which existed independently in different counties until they amalgamated within Bedfordshire in 1965. Leighton Buzzard, with its 15th century pentagonal cross and street market, was mentioned as a market town in the Domesday Book. Mellowed 17th and 18th century houses are a feature of both towns and a new shopping development in Leighton Buzzard's town centre blends with the old. There are new residential developments in both towns and Leighton Buzzard also has flourishing light industries on its outskirts, where sand extraction has long been of importance.

Continous human habitation reaching back 4,000 years can be traced at Dunstable, situated in the centre of the district where crossroads are formed by the ancient Icknield Way and Watling Street. The Priory Church of St. Peter is all that remains of the once-important Dunstable Priory, where the dissolution of Henry VIII's marriage to Catherine of Aragon was pronounced by Archbishop Cranmer. The town is now a thriving centre of the motor industry and lives up to its modern image with a fine pedestrian shopping precinct, a flourishing civic hall and one of the most up-to-date recreation centres in the country.

There are 19 rural parishes within the district, the largest village being Houghton Regis where 1,470 houses built by the Greater London Council in 1962 have now been taken into the district council's housing stock and a further GLC town development scheme of 2,500 houses is under construction.

Direct rail links, the M1 and A5 make the district easily accessible from London and Birmingham and there is plenty to attract visitors. Dunstable Downs provide the spectacle of gliding and hang gliding, as well as opportunities for walking and picnics. Whipsnade Zoo is also situated on the Downs and Luton Hoo stately home is in the south of the district. The canal at Linslade is popular with boaters and anglers and train rides on the old sand-carrying narrow gauge railway at Leighton Buzzard is a popular attraction.

Agencies. The following county council and regional water authority functions are carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Refuse Disposal; Sewerage.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the Chesterton RD and South Cambridgeshire RD which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

The district, which completely surrounds the City of Cambridge and covers the whole of the southern part of the new County, is predominantly agricultural in character, but light industries have been established in some villages including a large jam and preserving factory, tanneries, leather and glove factories, paper mills, lime and cement works and chemical fertilizer plant. Further light industrial development is proceeding.

Main drainage is in operation in the majority of the villages, and every parish has a piped water supply. Further main drainage schemes are in progress or planned so that virtually the whole of the rural district will be sewered where practicable.

A weekly collection of refuse from all parishes is undertaken by direct labour and a cesspool-emptying service on a rechargeable but partially subsidized basis is available to unsewered areas.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The Borough boundaries are the same as the former County Borough before reorganization.

The resident and visitor both benefit from the facilities offered by this thriving commercial, residential, shopping and holiday centre. Situated on the Essex bank of the Thames Estuary with a shore frontage of seven miles from Leigh in the west to Shoeburyness in the east, this modern town is served by two rail links from Liverpool Street and Fenchurch Street.

The Council-owned one-and-one-third mile long pier (with an electric railway running its length) together with its ten pin bowling alley and other traditional entertainment attracts about a million visitors a year.

Flanked by a modern motel and an historic aircraft museum the Municipal Airport is one of the busiest in the country with full customs and servicing facilities and its own industrial complex. Scheduled daily passenger services to Rotterdam, Ostend, Le Touquet and the Channel Islands are operated, together with regular services to Basle.

The continuing process of rebuilding has provided the town with a modern multi-storey office centre, pedestrianized and car park linked shopping areas and improved cliffs, esplanades roads, etc., and over 10,000 council-maintained parking spaces.

From obtaining the Borough Charter in 1892, Southend-on-Sea achieved its present size in 1933. County Borough status was enjoyed from 1914 to 1974.

A Civic Precinct has been created, incorporating Council Offices, Civic Suite, Courts, College of Technology, a modern Central Library and Police Headquarters.

Eight local Yacht Clubs demonstrate that excellent water-borne facilities exist for the keen amateur sailor in the sheltered estuary. Other sports well catered for in the Council-owned 1,200 acres of parks and open spaces are football, cricket, rugby and hockey, tennis, and bowls. A public 18-hole golf course at Belfairs is complemented by the private course at Thorpe Bay. The town has three public swimming pools.

The Council's Cliff's Pavilion sees the full range of entertainment from opera to wrestling, from variety to dancing, plus exhibitions and conferences, together with excellent catering facilities.

The Council also owns and manages the foreshore, buses, and has its own catering and entertainment facilities.

Council developed industrial estates have been created at Eastwood, Southend and Shoeburyness.

The Council has a fund for the provision of hospitality to delegates to conferences held in Southend-on-Sea.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:
Spalding UD, East Elloe RD, Spalding RD.

Spalding, once an inland port on the banks of the River Welland, is a typical country market town; and it may still be said that "Spalding is an handsome town", as James Camden, the historian described it in the 16th century.

Modern Spalding is skilfully blended with the ancient town; the old houses, some of them Georgian, exist alongside the modern shops and houses. In recent years there has been much planned development in Spalding; the expansion continues.

The surrounding tulip fields which have made the town world famous are the shop windows of a thriving bulb and horticultural industry.

No less important is Spalding's place in agriculture.

It is the centre of some of the most fertile land in the country.

It is also the focal point of one of the most important land drainage systems in the country, with a network of waterways, controlled by skilled engineers, which plays a vital part in keeping the district immune from flooding by the water which rushes down to the sea from inland hills.

The two-mile Coronation Channel, a by-pass of the river, with its modern electrically-operated sluices, is a masterpiece of engineering, and is an integral part of the Welland Major improvement scheme which is taking place from the Wash at Fosdyke to Stamford, a distance of 30 miles.

The former Rural District of Spalding comprises 10 civil parishes and extends to 87,758 acres around the market town of Spalding.

This is a countryside of flat, low-lying fens, intersected by slow-flowing rivers and dykes, and possessing a distinctive charm and fascination. As in Holland scientific methods of drainage have provided a vast acreage of alluvial soil which is justly claimed as the richest in England.

These fenlands are noted for their magnificent old churches. At Crowland are the remains of its famous abbey and the fourteenth century triangular bridge, the only one of its kind in England.

The former Rural District of East Elloe covers an area of 84,595 acres and comprises 12 parishes.

The main centres of population are situated along the road between King's Lynn and Spalding. North of this are the marshes and southwards lie the fens. The name of the administrative county, Parts of Holland, indicates the similarity between this scenery and that of the Netherlands. Once a vast tract of fever-infested swamps, this area has been systematically drained so that it now provides some of the richest agricultural land in all England.

The open countryside, with its bracing air, its bulbfields in spring and its thriving farms and fine old churches, has a characteristic charm and offers much of interest to those who visit it.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,200.

Towcester racecourse is situated on the outskirts of the town. A number of very beautiful churches and old houses are to be found throughout the district, and it is an interesting area historically. The district includes the small town of Brackley, with an attractive, wide main street, and excellent educational facilities. DEFINITION OF AREA

Henley on Thames MB, Wallingford MB, Thame UD, Bullingdon RD, Henley RD, Wallingford RD.

The district is predominantly rural, agricultural and residential with some industrial development. It borders with Oxford in the north and Reading in the south. The are 86 rural parishes and 4 towns, viz. the ancient market town of Wallingford near the centre; Henley-on-Thames, famous for its Royal Regatta, on the southern boundary; the market town of Thame on the northern boundary and Didcot on the western boundary. The Chiltern Hills, with their extensive beechwoods, stretch across the southern half of the district and a large part of this has been designated an area of outstanding natural beauty. Much of the River Thames from Oxford, through the Goring gap, to Henley is within the district. The M40 motorway crosses the northern part of the district and access to the M4 is only a few minutes from the southern boundary. There are main line railway stations (Western Region) at Goring, Cholsey and Didcot and a branch line serves Henley.

Agencies. The following county council functions are carried out by the borough council on an agency basis: Certain Highway Functions; Food and Drugs; Refuse Disposal.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA
The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:
Leyland UD, Walton-le-Dale UD, Preston RD (parishes of Cuerdale, Farington, Hutton, Little Hoole, Longton, Much Hoole, Penwortham and Samlesbury).

The South Ribble Borough is situated within Central Lancashire and is the geographical centre of the Central Lancashire New Town. Road and rail communications are excellent; both the main north–south motorway (the M6) and rail routes pass through the area as does the M61 giving access to Manchester and Yorkshire.

The majority of the early development being carried out by the Development Corporation is within South Ribble's area. The first industrial estate and three major housing developments are currently under development. The total population of the Borough is expected to rise from 90,000 to 150,000 by the end of the century.

Within the town of Leyland work is expected to start on a new shopping centre, not only to uplift the facilities for existing population, but to also enable it to play its township role within the New Town as a major shopping area. South Ribble is fortunate in having many substantial industries within its boundaries including the largest commercial vehicle manufacturers in the country, British Leyland Bus and Truck Division. It is the home of Baxi Heating Limited, B.T.R. Industries, Leyland and Birmingham Rubber Company Limited and Leyland Paints.

Agricultural land in the rural part of the district is extremely fertile and there are many market gardens and nurseries engaged in intensive horticulture.

The Council owns a modern public swimming pool, several recreation grounds and two large areas of parkland at Leyland and Penwortham. Pleasant residential areas are situated both within the New Town and in the parishes to the east and west.

The Council's administrative centre moved to a large new office block in Leyland during June, 1976. The Civic Centre houses all the departments of the Council and contains a unique Council Suite designed not only to provide a Council Chamber and meeting rooms, but to fulfil a dual role by providing meeting rooms and banqueting facilities for private hire to the public.

The headquarters of the Lancashire branch of the Council for the Protection of Rural England is situated in part of Samlesbury Hall, a well-preserved sixteenth century manor house, now used mainly as a cultural and leisure centre.

Agencies. The following regional water authority function is carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Sewerage.

DEFINITION OF AREA

Clun and Bishop's Castle RD, Ludlow RD.

The District is situated in the south-western part of the county of Salop. It is bordered by the Welsh county of Powis in the west and the county of Hereford and Worcester in the south. The area of the district represents 30% of the area of the county but has only 10% of the population of the county.

This area of gently contoured hills and fertile valley is recognised as one of the loveliest parts of the country and contains much of the Shropshire Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The main industry is agriculture—animal husbandry, dairy, grain—with associated industries, but a variety of trades and light industries have been established.

There is a wealth of buildings of architectural and historic interest, manor houses, castles and attractive villages. Ludlow, the largest of the towns, with its castle, exceptionally fine parish church, black and white buildings and Georgian streets has been described as the most beautiful and distinguished country town in England and was at one time the seat of government for the Welsh Marches. The small towns of Bishop's Castle, Church Stretton, Cleobury Mortimer and Clun are all well worth a visit.

The district is attractive to the tourist and holiday maker not only because of its scenic and historic interest but also for racing at Ludlow, gliding on the Long Mynd, fishing, boating and other sports.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

The county borough of South Shields.
In the administrative county of Durham:
  the borough of Jarrow;
  the urban districts of Boldon and Hebburn.

The borough of South Tyneside is situated, as its name implies, on the south bank of the River Tyne at its mouth. It is an important seaport, occupying a prominent place in the industrial life not only of Tyneside but of the North East.

The principal industries of the district are shipbuilding and repair, engineering and coal-mining and these have been supplemented in recent years by the establishment of many new light industries on the Bede and the Simonside Industrial Estates and elsewhere.

Formed by the amalgamation of South Shields, Jarrow, Hebburn and Boldon, the Borough has inherited a history dating back to the second century, when there existed at the mouth of the River Tyne a Roman Fort, the remains of which can still be seen today. Further up river, at Jarrow, can be found the Church of St. Paul which is on the site of a monastery in which the Venerable Bede lived and worked during the late seventh and early eighth centuries, spreading his knowledge to students from all over Europe.

South Shields was the home of the inventor of the lifeboat, William Wouldhave, who designed it, following a number of shipwrecks on the Herd Sands, in 1789 and saw it launched in 1790.

Although principally an industrial area, the Borough is also a holiday resort with some fine stretches of beach and coastline. In particular, the 'Leas', a coastal grassland area of some 200 acres, is regarded by many as one of the finest stretches of coastal open space in the country. The district is also well served with some excellent parks and has three public swimming baths.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,200.

The following county council and regional water authority functions are carried out by the city council on an agency basis: Highways, Refuse Disposal (under Civic Amenities Act only), Maintenance of premises and grounds, Central purchasing, Construction and maintenance of sewerage systems under Section 15 of Water Act, 1973.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The city comprises the areas of the Stoke-on-Trent CB which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

Stoke-on-Trent (Staffordshire), familiarly known as The Potteries, stands on the River Trent, 157 miles north of London. The present municipal area is 22,916 acres (36 square miles), with a population (estimated, 1975) of 255,800. The City is the main centre of employment for the half million population of North Staffordshire. It is the largest clayware producer in the world (chinaware, earthenware, sanitary goods, refractories, bricks and tiles), and has a large coal mining output drawn from one of the richest coalfields in Western Europe, with proved reserves exceeding one thousand million tons. The City has ironworks, steelworks, foundries, chemical works, engineering plants, rubber works, paper mills and a very wide range of manufactures including textiles, furniture, electrical goods, vehicle components, toys, machinery, plastic materials, metal stampings, glass and glazes.

Extensive reconstruction has been carried on since 1930. A unique feature of the City is that it has six 'centres' and more shops and public halls than other areas of comparable size. The City was formed by the federation in 1910 of the separate municipal authorities of Tunstall, Burslem, Hanley, Stoke-upon-Trent, Fenton and Longton, all of which are now combined in the present City of Stoke-on-Trent. Each of the six areas still has its own public buildings and amenities, but all civic administration is controlled by the City Council.

In recent years, a massive programme of environmental improvements has been undertaken in Stoke-on-Trent which is transforming the appearance of the City. The most notable project is the Land Reclamation programme which has brought hundreds of acres of derelict land back into use for public open space, industry and housing. Central Forest Park, a gently rolling expanse of grass, young trees and wildflowers, was constructed on the site of a defunct colliery—an area previously dominated by huge black pit mounds and whose only uniformity was its utter dereliction. It is a scheme which has deservedly brought national and international acclaim to the City. Similarly, the Westport Lake Park scheme with its artificial beach, visited by thousands on sunny days, has won national awards and commendations. Boating, canoeing and fishing are catered for here and the nature study area is proving very popular with local schools.

To complement the reclamation schemes, the grime of decades has been removed from dozens of the fine buildings in the city, revealing their original beautiful colours and high-lighting their architectural features.

The reclamation programme, together with the Smoke Control Programme, has made the City a pleasant place to live in. New roads, main drainage schemes, new schools, improved street lighting and a refuse incinerator all feature in programmes for improving the City's facilities. They will enable the City to realize to the full its potential as a major centre for commerce and industry.

Mayoral annual allowance: £2,650.

Agency. The following regional water authority function is carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Sewerage.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

Nailsworth UD, Stroud UD, Dursley RD, Gloucester RD (part), Sodbury RD (part), Stroud RD, Thornbury RD (part).

Situated on the edge of the southern Cotswolds the western half of the district comprises part of the Severn Vale with the River Severn forming the western boundary, and the eastern part consists of the Cotswold escarpment offering some of the loveliest scenery in the county. The main towns of Stroud, Dursley and Nailsworth offer good facilities for shopping and entertainment and other residential centres and villages such as Stonehouse, Painswick, Wotton-under-Edge, Minchinhampton, Berkeley, Chalford and Bisley add to the charm of the area. Extensive commons and National Trust open spaces give considerable scope for the tourist and rambler in particular with attractive views from the hills and beacons.

Whilst the area has long been noted for cloth making the industrial aspect is diverse including light engineering, plastics, electronics, food products, pianos, fibre board, furniture, printing and a variety of crafts.

Good recreational facilities are available throughout the area and at Stroud there is an indoor recreation centre and pool in a 48-acre park. Joint sports centres exist at Dursley and Wotton-under-Edge. Four golf courses, two gliding clubs, riding schools, fishing and other facilities exist.

The M5 motorway bisects the district and the M4 and Severn Bridge are close at hand. Stroud has a station on the main Western Region line from Paddington to Gloucester. Sharpness Docks are the nearest to the Midlands with a canal to Gloucester.

Agencies. The following regional water authority functions are carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Sewerage schemes.

DEFINITION OF AREA

Aldeburgh MB, Felixstowe UD, Leiston-cum-Sizewell UD, Saxmundham UD, Woodbridge UD, Blyth RD, Deben RD.

The northern part of the district is mainly agricultural in nature while the southern half is largely tourist country of old world atmosphere with renowned specimens of ecclesiastical architecture and others of historical interest of Roman and Saxon origin. Large tracts of forests add to the attractiveness of the district, which has a coastline from Walberswick in the north to Felixstowe in the south, including a bird sanctuary at Minsmere. The district contains several towns.

Aldeburgh, whose first charter is dated 1529, is an attractive holiday resort, famous for historical buildings and its annual Festival.

Felixstowe is a holiday and residential seaside town and although on the east coast, enjoys a southern aspect. There is a modern theatre (seating 977) in which summer shows are presented and, in the out-of-seasons months, drama festivals, amateur musical shows, pantomimes, etc. There is also a modern pavilion and ballroom providing dances, musical entertainment and other attractions, including wrestling and boxing. Good facilities exist for conferences. There are 4 miles of beach and foreshore, with public gardens, beach chalets, beach sites and a variety of sea front amenities. Extensive expansion is taking place at the privately owned docks, and trade with the Continent and other countries, including America, is steadily increasing. Light industry is established and more is being encouraged.

Leiston, an expanding town notable for the nuclear power station at Sizewell, has 2 miles of undeveloped coast open to the public. There is a Sports Centre in the town with facilities for most indoor sports and recreational activities, including a bar.

Woodbridge, on the River Deben, is an attractive country town with many buildings of special architectural and historic interest. Recreational facilities are catered for by a swimming pool, Elmhurst Park, several large playing fields and the river wall, along which there are seats, shelters, and children's play areas.

Saxmundham is a small attractive country town on the trunk road A12 which runs on a north–south axis through the district.

Other sport and recreation is catered for in the district by several golf courses and by sailing and boating clubs on the Rivers Alde/Ore, Deben and Orwell.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,000.

Frimley and Camberley UD, Bagshot RD.

As its name suggests, the borough comprises an attractive heathland area of north-west Surrey, which has for over a hundred years had strong military associations. The borough, which is served by the M3 motorway, is to a large extent of a rural character, although Frimley and Camberley have expanded rapidly in recent years as a result of residential and light industrial development and the redevelopment of the central area of Camberley, providing a spacious modern shopping centre, is almost complete. At Camberley there is a museum and also a modern Civic Hall which provides facilities for public entertainments and social functions.

The four parishes of Bisley, Chobham, West End and Windlesham make up the eastern portion of the district. Both Chobham and Windlesham contain several village communities, the latter including Bagshot.

The council owns a number of recreation grounds and open spaces, including a country park of 120 acres at Lightwater.

Mayoral annual allowance: £2,000.

The city comprises the areas of Swansea, Mumbles and Gower.

Swansea was established by the Normans shortly after AD 1100 as the fortress and administrative centre of their new Lordship of Gower. It continued as the market town for the area, until industrial development in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries greatly increased its size and importance. The heavy industries of the last century have now been replaced by trading estates providing sites for modern light industry, major industries having been established around the boundaries of the district. The extensive docks at Swansea provide excellent facilities for the area and the airport is located within six miles of the commercial centre.

The commercial centre at Swansea has been completely rebuilt following severe war damage and now serves a large area of South Wales. Further major developments are under construction which will extend the shopping area on the most modern lines. Re-development has provided modern office accommodation, and a vast Leisure Centre will be opening in the city centre in 1977. The extensive campus of the University College is beautifully situated between the sea-shore and Singleton Park.

To complement the industrial and commercial activities, the Swansea district possesses considerable natural amenities. The wide curve of Swansea Bay provides a fine setting for the principal built-up areas and to the west of these lies the delightful peninsula of Gower. The varied cliff scenery and sandy beaches of its south coast are backed by an undulating landscape of fields and open commons, features which have led to the peninsula being declared the first Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The peninsula is rich in prehistoric remains, castles and churches and these, added to the natural amenities, encourage a busy holiday trade. The good soils, mild climate and convenient markets support a successful mixed farming economy.

Agencies. The following county council functions are carried out by the borough council on an agency basis:

Maintenance of all district and county highways and district and road improvements up to £250,000.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the area of Tamworth MB which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

Tamworth has been a borough from Saxon times. Queen Elizabeth I granted a Charter of incorporation in 1560, reciting that Tamworth was an ancient market town which had been held of the Kings of England by the inhabitants from time immemorial. A further charter of incorporation was granted by Charles II in 1663. The corporation owns an ancient castle and grounds with extensive pleasure grounds adjoining, which provide ample facilities for sport and recreation.

The council is heavily committed to a town development scheme geared to the reception of overspill families from Birmingham and provision of industrial development to support employment in a population planned to increase to 78,000 by 1981 and under the County Structure Plan at present with the Department of the Environment to 93,000 by 1991. The council's commitment is part of a £100,000,000 capital works programme which is being undertaken jointly with the Staffordshire County Council to provide houses, industrial sites, schools, highways, welfare and recreational facilities for the increased community.

To date some 7,526 dwellings have been provided under the town expansion scheme (3,630 local authority and 3,896 private). Up to 1981 house building is planned at the rate of approximately 1,000 a year.

The council's new indoor swimming pool was opened in October 1971 and a new central library was completed during 1973. A municipal golf course has been constructed at Amington and this was opened for play in 1975.

A major redevelopment of the town centre is now under way.

Work on phase one, two and three of the new Amington industrial estate has now been completed.

A comprehensive programme costing some £18 million for the provision of a major road network in the town has been approved by the Staffordshire County Council and will be implemented as an essential part of the town development scheme.

Agencies. The following regional water authority functions are carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Sewerage, Drainage.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the former Caterham and Warlingham UD and Godstone RD and extends from the Greater London boundary in the north to Kent in the east and Sussex in the south.

The character of the northern part of the district has been largely determined by the growth of London. However, the impact has been contained by the natural barrier of the North Downs which has confined development either to the narrow valleys or to the expansion of long-standing upland settlements. Numerous areas of open country still remain in the form of tree-covered valley slopes and arable farmlands which in places extend to the Greater London boundary. The ruggedness of the terrain, the profusion of trees and the pastoral nature of much of the uplands have combined to strike a balance between the material needs of development and the preservation of a natural environment. The main residential areas are at Caterham Valley, Caterham-on-the-Hill, Warlingham and Whyteleafe.

Below the North Downs, the district stretches southwards to the Weald and Sussex, at the same time joining with Kent to the east. Rich and varied, the entire tract of country is still representative of the best of the English landscape. Its natural features blend so well with man-made pastures, woodlands and settlements that even the advent of the M23 and M25 motorways has in many instances created new aspects and vistas which add to rather than detract from the particular enchantment of this beautiful countryside.

Throughout there are delightful villages and hamlets, which retain many buildings of historic interest, including churches, manor houses, timbered cottages and inns too numerous to list. Other objects of interest include a windmill at Outwood (built 1666) which is one of the oldest working examples in the country and a yew tree in Crowhurst churchyard with a girth of 32 ft. Lingfield Racecourse is nationally known and Redhill Aerodrome at Nutfield, extensively used by Fighter Command during the last war, now accommodates the headquarters of the largest private helicopter operator in the world.

The new Tandridge District bears a name a thousand years old. Though ancient, its roots are strong and secure; its heritage recognized and respected. The present reflects the careful husbandry of the past and the future is assured by the policy of co-operation between county and district in preserving the outstanding natural amenities of the area.

Taunton MB, Wellington UD, Taunton RD, Wellington RD.

The borough is situated in the fertile Vale of Taunton Deane, in an area of exceptional natural beauty, and has many historical associations.

Its location at the focal point of entry to the south-west has made it a centre for rail and road traffic. Main-line rail and express coach services serve Taunton, and the M5 Motorway passes just to the south of Taunton and Wellington.

The prosperity of the district depends chiefly on agriculture, marketing and trading facilities, government and local government administrative services, tourism, and light industry.

It is an ideal touring centre for coastal resorts of north Somerset, south Devon and Dorset, the Quantock Hills, Exmoor National Park, and the Mendip Hills.

There are four public schools in the district, and excellent recreational facilities, including a new sports centre at Wellington.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,000.

TEESDALE (Durham)

Elections will be of whole council.

Pop., 24,100; RV, £1,931,041; Rates, 66·62p to 71·12p; Area, 208,311 Ac.

Parliamentary Constituencies (2): Bishop Auckland, Richmond (North Yorkshire).

Regional Water Authority: Northumbrian.

Superannuation Scheme administered by the Durham CC.

Audit by District Auditor.

The district comprises the areas of the following authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974: Barnard Castle UD, Barnard Castle RD, Startforth RD.

Teesdale district is the largest in Durham County but is sparsely populated. Agriculture is the prime industry, centred on the market town of Barnard Castle. The town is designated as a Conservation Area, being one of the finest market towns in the north, and everything is being done to preserve its charm and character.

The town is the recognized starting point for excursions into beautiful Teesdale. For its size it has more than its share of literary and historical associations. The castle built in the 12th century by Bernard Baliol is now a ruin in the care of the Ministry of Works. The town has Dickensian associations, the author being inspired to write "Nicholas Nickleby" and "Master Humphrey's Clock" in this locality. Unique is the Bowes Museum of French Renaissance design built in mid 19th century by John Bowes and his wife. Nearby is Greta Bridge and Rokeby, a stately home immortalized by Sir Walter Scott in his epic poem of that name.

Nearby villages are of interest. Staindrop with its notable church also has 14th century Raby Castle, a well-preserved medieval fortress. Egglestone Abbey, founded 1195 is one mile from Barnard Castle.

Upper Teesdale, that stretch of the valley from the river's source to Middleton-in-Teesdale, contains plants that have survived the last ice age and the area contains two great waterfalls, High Force and Cauldron Snout.

Parliamentary Constituency: Harwich.

Regional Water Authority: Anglian.

Superannuation Scheme administered by the Essex CC.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

Harwich MB, Brightlingsea UD, Clacton UD, Frinton and Walton UD, Tendring RD.

The district of Tendring comprises the north-eastern part of the county of Essex. The major part of the perimeter has a water frontage extending from just above Manningtree on the south bank of the River Stour to Wivenhoe on the east bank of the River Colne, a distance of some 38 miles.

In character, the district is partly urban and partly rural and by reason of the fast and frequent rail service from the coastal towns is much favoured for residential purposes by those whose place of business or work is in London, Chelmsford or Colchester.

The ancient borough of Harwich, incorporating Harwich and Dovercourt Bay, was incorporated under a charter of James I. Harwich is a port of some importance and provides fast passenger and freight services to and from the various ports in Holland, Belgium, Germany, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland. The harbour is under the control of the Conservancy Board. Brightlingsea at the mouth of the River Colne is another sea-faring town and is the home of the Colchester native oyster.

The hinterland is mainly agricultural and consists of some of the best farmland in the country. Light industrial development is encouraged and a number of sizeable companies have transferred their manufacturing activities from the Metropolis to factories on sites provided by the local authority.

The area is probably best known for its attractions to holidaymakers. Dovercourt Bay, Frinton-on-Sea, Walton-on-the-Naze, Clacton-on-Sea, Holland-on-Sea, Jaywick, St. Osyth Beach, Point Clear and Brightlingsea are all popular resorts providing as they do for all types of holidaymakers. As could be expected, with its rivers, creeks, and coastline, the district is very well provided with facilities for water recreation, especially sailing, power boating and fishing.

Because of the quality and cleanliness of the beaches and the prevailing climatic conditions—plenty of sun and rainfall well below the national average—the coastal towns have always attracted those who are interested in family holidays. The piers at Clacton-on-Sea and Walton-on-the-Naze, both of which are operated by the same private company, offer a variety of entertainment seldom found elsewhere.

The district generally is well provided with recreational facilities of most kinds including three golf courses, indoor and outdoor bowling rinks and extensive recreation grounds with tennis courts and pitches for team games of practically every variety. A heated indoor swimming pool in Clacton was completed and opened in the autumn of 1974.

Those who prefer rural attractions to those of the seaside have the benefit of being in close proximity to the delightful Constable country around Dedham and East and West Bergholt, the backwaters of the Rivers Stour and Colne, and the saltings and creeks behind Walton.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,750.

Agencies. The following county council functions are carried out by the borough council on an agency basis: Highway Maintenance and Construction; Traffic Management; Road Safety; Refuse Disposal; Libraries.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the areas of the Swindon BC and Highworth RDC which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

On Thamesdown's northern boundary are the picturesque upper reaches of the River Thames and in the south are the rolling North Wiltshire Downs. In between there are villages of great charm and historic connection.

At the centre is the former railway town of Swindon, which has achieved outstanding success as an expanding town under the 1952 Town Development Act. More than 200 companies have established manufacturing, office and distribution centres there. The estimated population of the Borough is expected to grow through further planned expansion to a figure of 185,000 by 1986.

There has been a massive housing and school building programme to cater for the needs of incoming population and Swindon's central shopping area is being redeveloped. A 13-acre traffic free shopping centre has been built by the local authority and the most imposing feature of this development is a 22-storey tower block of offices and flats. The first phase of the town's Civic Centre, opened by the Queen in 1971, includes a 600 seat theatre and arts centre. There is a multi-purpose leisure centre and a new 18-hole municipal golf course and two approach courses.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,715.

Superannuation Scheme administered by Essex CC.

Agencies. The following county council and regional water authority functions are carried out by the borough council on an agency basis: Food and Drugs, Libraries, Highways, Sewerage.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the area of Thurrock Urban District Council (part) which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

The Borough of Thurrock covers an area of 45,551 acres, or more than 67 square miles. It is situated in Essex on the north side of the River Thames with a river frontage of 18 miles between the London Borough of Havering in the west and Canvey Island in the east.

Within the boundaries of the district are the large residential areas of Aveley, Chadwell St. Mary, Corringham, Grays, Little Thurrock, South Ockendon (including the large GLC Estate at Belhus), Stanford-le-Hope, Tilbury, West Thurrock, and the villages of Bulphan, Fobbing, Horndon-on-the-Hill, Linford, Mucking, North Stifford, Orsett, East Tilbury and West Tilbury.

The riverside area of Thurrock is highly industrialized and incorporates the large modern container port of Tilbury; extensive oil refineries at Coryton and Shell Haven and bulk storage installations at Purfleet, West Thurrock and South Stifford; a large cement manufacturing industry; plus many industrial organizations of both national and international repute. Due to the geological structure of the district the extraction of chalk, gravel and other materials from the ground forms another major industry and throughout the area there are many quarries.

But Thurrock is not wholly residential or industrial. The hinterland of the district contains some extremely attractive countryside and charming villages and there are many thriving agricultural communities. There are a number of fine old churches, some of exceptional historic interest.

There are approximately 42,822 domestic properties in the Borough, of which 14,228 are Council-owned.

Grays is the commercial centre of the Borough. A large new town shopping centre has been constructed adjoining the present Grays High Street. There are modern shopping centres at Corringham Town Centre; Derwent Parade, South Ockendon; Defoe Parade, Chadwell St. Mary; King Street, Stanford-le-Hope; Broadway, Tilbury; and Crammavill Street, Stifford Clays.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,750.

Superannuation Scheme administered by Gwent CC.

Agencies. The following county council and regional water authority functions are carried out by the borough council on an agency basis: Highways; Sewerage and Pumping Stations; Street Lighting; Food and Drugs.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

In the administrative county of Monmouthshire:
- the urban districts of Blaenavon, Cwmbran and Pontypool;
- in the rural district of Magor and St. Mellons, the parish of Henllys;
- in the rural district of Pontypool, the parish of Llanfrechfa Lower.

The borough of Torfaen consists of an amalgamation of Blaenavon UDC, Cwmbran UDC, Pontypool UDC and part of Pontypool RDC i.e. the district of Croesyceiliog and Llanfrechfa Lower together with a small part of Magor and St. Mellon's RDC, consisting of the parish of Henllys (approximately 250 persons). Thus the Eastern Valley of Gwent becomes one district and its very name, Torfaen, is the old name of the river (now called the Afon Lwyd) which flows from top to bottom of the valley and joins the Usk near Newport.

Pontypool itself is the home of the Welsh iron industry, forges being established in the 15th century. In the 18th century, iron works and coal mines were developed in Pontypool and Blaenavon and the area became famous for its iron, particularly for the development of Japan ware.

Cwmbran to the south was, before the war, a small industrial town which, because of the creation of the Cwmbran New Town, all of which lies within the Torfaen area, has become a modern residential area with an ultimate population of 55,000. It incorporates a fine shopping centre with covered walkways and excellent car parking facilities.

The old iron and coal industries have virtually ceased in the area and in their place there are ICI Fibres, Parke-Davis (Pharmaceutical Manufacturers), Girling, British Steel Corporation, Fibreglass Ltd., Saunders Valves Ltd., Alfa Laval Ltd., and many other smaller industrial units.

Torfaen is excellently placed to attract industrial development. It is within easy reach of the Newport docks and in close proximity to the M4 to London and the south and the M5 to Birmingham and the north together with the Heads of the Valley road from Swansea and the valleys of Glamorgan.

Despite the industrial progress, Torfaen is an area of great natural beauty ranging from the mountains in the north and west to the wooded and arable land to the south and east. The river Usk and its tributaries are well stocked with salmon and trout and the Brecon Beacons National Park extends into the area.

Land reclamation schemes and forestry are playing their part in restoring the area to its original beauty.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,500.

The Metropolitan Borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

In the administrative county of Chester:
  the boroughs of Altrincham and Sale;
  the urban districts of Bowdon and Hale;
In the rural district of Bucklow, the parishes of Carrington, Dunham Massey, Partington and Warburton.
In the administrative county of Lancaster:
  the borough of Stretford;
  the urban district of Urmston.

Situated in the south-west of the Greater Manchester conurbation, Trafford contains an interesting range of differing urban and rural environments. Ease of communication is one of its principal assets. Manchester International Airport, via the M63 and M56 Motorways is within a very short distance, whilst Liverpool (Speke) Airport can be reached quite easily by the M63 and M62 Motorways. The M63 motorway running through the borough gives immediate access to the national network, and the Manchester Ship Canal forms the western boundary of the Borough. The Port of Manchester is adjacent to the Borough with the port of Liverpool and the Port of Preston within sixty minutes' driving time. Major sources of employment exist in the industrial complexes of Trafford Park, Carrington and Broadheath (Altrincham). Four main and numerous subsidiary centres provide a wide variety of shopping facilities, together with many new office developments. Pleasant residential areas in all parts of the borough are linked to the city centre by good roads and fast and frequent train services. Old Trafford contains the grounds of the Lancashire County Cricket Club and Manchester United Football Club; Dunham Park (seat of the Earl of Stamford) with its fallow deer and 16th century deer barn, the Bollin and Mersey Valleys and the Bridgewater Canal all offer many opportunities for recreation.

Saffron Walden MB, Dunmow RD, Saffron Walden RD.

The district contains 57 civil parishes and covers the largest acreage of any district in the county. It is situated in the north-west of the county, being bounded by Cambridgeshire to the north and Hertfordshire to the west. The main centres of population are Saffron Walden, Great Dunmow and Stansted Mountfitchet. The countryside is widely considered the most attractive to be found in the county, and indeed large areas of the district have been classed as areas of great landscape value while part of it lies within the proposed extension to the Metropolitan Green Belt. The district is well watered, principally by the Cam, the Chelmer, the Roding and the Stort and by numerous tributaries of these rivers.

The towns and villages contain many buildings of great architectural and/or historic interest in a wide variety of styles. Some of the better known of these buildings are Thaxted Guildhall, Audley End Mansion near Saffron Walden and Horham Hall near Thaxted. In addition, Saffron Walden and Thaxted boast two of the finest and most celebrated churches in the county.

The district is very largely agricultural in character but a number of light industries have become established and the council has set up a six-acre industrial estate in Great Dunmow. The leisure demands of modern society have been recognized by the establishment of a joint use sports complex in Great Dunmow which has recently been opened, and the needs of the Saffron Walden area are currently being carefully examined.

Chairman's annual allowance: £500.

Agencies. The following county council and regional water authority functions are carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Refuse Disposal; Food and Drugs; Construction of Estate Roads; Sewerage Maintenance.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:
Abingdon MB, Wantage UD, Abingdon RD, Faringdon RD, Wantage RD (part).

The district takes its name from the famous monument carved on the crest of Uffington Hill, the oldest of all the White Horses in England, and the Vale is drained by the little River Ock, which empties into the Thames at Abingdon.
The district is mainly rural in character, with areas of great natural beauty along the escarpment of the Berkshire Downs and the sylvan reaches of the Upper Thames, to which river it has the longest frontage of any district. At the same time, it is also the home of modern industries, such as the manufacture of motor cars and surgical instruments, and the major research establishments of the Atomic Energy Authority and the Esso Research Centre at Harwell and the Agricultural Research Council near Wantage.

The administrative headquarters of the council is at Abingdon, which possesses a fine civic centre incorporating buildings of every period from the 15th to the 20th centuries. Abingdon is one of the fifty towns listed by the Department of the Environment as worthy of special conservation for its architectural merit and historic associations. Also of interest are the market towns of Wantage, the birthplace in 849 of Alfred the Great, and Faringdon, where King Edward the Elder died in 925. The council maintains area offices in both these towns.

The council owns parks and gardens at Abingdon and Wantage, and public halls in both these towns and at North Hinksey, near Oxford. In 1975, the council commissioned the Old Gaol Recreation Centre in Abingdon, formed by the conversion of the original gaol building (1811) and in 1976 another centre for sports and recreation was opened in Wantage. The central area redevelopment of Abingdon has now been carried forward to its next stage in the Charter Centre, providing for a new library, medical centre, old people's day centre, restaurant, offices and a multi-storey car park for 500 cars.

Agencies. The following county council and regional water authority functions are carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Maintenance and improvement of highways and traffic regulation; Waste disposal; Construction, maintenance and adoption of sewers.

Northwich UD, Winsford UD, Northwich RD, Runcorn RD (part).

The district is situated in Central Cheshire and is centred on the Cheshire Salt Field. Most of the district consists of attractive and high quality farming land; it includes part of the Flat Cheshire Plain, Central Cheshire Hills and Delamere Forest.

The district has two main towns, Northwich and Winsford, several smaller towns, Frodsham, Helsby and Tarporley and numerous small villages situated in rural surroundings. The main towns were founded on salt production. Northwich, where ICI Ltd. is based, is an important centre for the chemical industry, and Winsford is famous for its rock salt mines. There are many sand quarries in the area and most of Cheshire's sand is obtained from these workings.

The chemical industry provides most of the jobs in the district, but in recent years there has been an increase in the number of jobs available in the manufacturing and service industries. There are also more opportunities for professional people. This trend is expected to continue and land has been allocated to accommodate new industry in the area.

The district has good access to the M6 motorway and the M56 when completed will give quick and easy access to Manchester.

The district has good connections with other parts of the country. Winsford is on the electrified London to Carlisle railway line. Northwich has rail links to Manchester and Chester and also Carlisle and London. There are two major airports within twenty miles at Speke and Manchester.

The district possesses a number of outdoor recreation facilities which attract a lot of visitors; the main one is Delamere Forest and surrounding Forestry Commission holdings. The numerous flashes and meres are used for angling, and the larger ones for sailing. The Weaver Navigation, the Trent and Mersey Canal, and Shropshire Union Canal are used increasingly for inland waterways cruising. Helsby and Frodsham hills are attractive walking and rock climbing spots. There are also golf courses, and the Oulton Park motor racing circuit. The Whitegate Way footpath and bridleway makes use of a disused railway line. There are plans to develop two major recreation areas, Marbury Park and Weaver Parkway, both of which involve the reclamation of large areas of derelict land. There is scope to intensify the use of some resources and to provide other facilities.

The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

The county borough of Walsall. In the administrative county of Staffordshire, the urban district of Aldridge-Brownhills.

The Metropolitan Borough of Walsall shares in the economic prosperity of the West Midlands, a prosperity based mainly on a highly complex manufacturing industry. As a producer of finished and semi-finished goods, Walsall makes a significant contribution to the national economy. Its industrial connections are world-wide and firms enjoy a vigorous export trade.

Economically and socially Walsall benefits from its central position. It is located at the crossing point of two growth corridors—London–Birmingham–Merseyside and Bristol–Humberside. The advantages of this position are increased by motorway M6 which passes through the metropolitan borough to connect with the trunk road A5 at Gailey nearby to the north. Now that the motorway link to the north of Birmingham is completed, Walsall is the focal point of the motorway system, with road connections with the major ports and the economic growth areas of Britain. There is, in addition, an electrified railway link to Birmingham, thus giving access to the main national railway network. London, Manchester and Birmingham are accessible for business, shopping and entertainment trips of a single day's duration; the recreational areas of North Wales, the Cotswolds and the Lake District are within convenient travelling distance, and the facilities of Birmingham Airport are available for foreign holiday and business travel.

At a regional scale, Walsall must be considered in its context as an integral part of the West Midlands Conurbation. Nevertheless the major district centres have their natural hinterland substantially within the metropolitan borough. Walsall Town Centre, with its well established shopping and administrative functions, exerts its influence over a considerable area of Staffordshire to the east and north-east.

The metropolitan borough is an important source of employment for persons living in the surrounding area.

Mayoral annual allowance: £2,500.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

Ashington UD, Bedlingtonshire UD, Newbiggin-by-the-Sea UD.

Wansbeck, has a well balanced environment fusing coast countryside and industry in an area with space to cater for further multi-purpose development. At Newbiggin, it has its own bay and sands which are part of Northumberland's heritage. There is a deep rooted history in the area which has 11th and 13th century church buildings and a 14th century castle at Bothal.

The basic industry of coal mining which fostered the early growth continues and caters for the needs of England's first aluminium smelter. An electrical generating station at Bedlington also adds power to the industrial strength of the area. A continuing growth of new light industries, on sites with ample room for expansion, is becoming established in pleasantly developed modern industrial estates and provides the necessary diversification of industry in the 20th century. Agriculture continues to thrive in the area and gives a quality of open space.

There is a complete educational system which includes several newly constructed schools and embraces the County Technical College centred at Ashington.

Leisure and recreation is well provided for within multi-purpose sports centres and developed natural resources in the rural, riverside and coastal areas of the district. The development on the River Wansbeck, including a Marina, has attracted support from the English Tourist Board, and is particularly pleasant. Facilities are well provided for all "outdoor" activities and the arts are particularly well catered for in the widest possible range and excellently serviced by the well-established Mid Northumberland Arts Group.

The development of the area, which includes a new 300-bed hospital, has not outgrown the shopping facilities and growth in this direction goes side by side with the other projects in the Wansbeck district which still retains a healthy community spirit in changing times.

Warrington is situated on the northern border of the new county of Cheshire midway between Liverpool and Manchester astride the River Mersey and the Manchester Ship Canal. The original settlement was founded long before the Romans established themselves in Britain. Today Warrington is a progressive industrial town with pleasant dormitory areas.

Following the reorganization of the local government system the new borough of Warrington was formed and consists of the former local government areas, namely the whole of the areas of the county borough of Warrington, the rural district of Warrington, the urban district of Lymm, and parts of Runcorn rural district and Golborne urban district. Runcorn rural district and Lymm urban district have always been within the couhty of Cheshire whereas the other three areas were formerly in the county of Lancashire. The new Warrington area is now wholly within the new county of Cheshire and many inhabitants who thought of themselves as true members of "red rose" county now find themselves as new and vigorous members of the new county of Cheshire, but of course, still "Warringtonians". Warrington Borough Council is from a rateable value and population point of view the largest district in Cheshire.

The new borough of Warrington will, above all else, be a district looking to the future and this it may do with well-founded confidence not only because it has the added advantage of being developed as a new town with financial assistance from the government being channelled through the Warrington New Town Development Corporation but also because the borough council has large comprehensive proposals for the redevelopment of the town centre of Warrington into modern shopping precincts and a comprehensive urban renewal programme. Furthermore, the variety of its manufacturers ensures continued prosperity and employment.

In addition to being situated on one of the main crossing points of the River Mersey and Manchester Ship Canal the new Warrington Borough is well served by both road and rail. The M6 and M62 motorways conjoin in the Warrington area and the direct access to these motorways gives very easy access to and from all parts of the country. In the southern extremities of the area is the North Cheshire Motorway, M56. Warrington Bridge is one of the few main road bridges across the River Mersey between Liverpool and Manchester and is the hub of traffic routes in all directions. A network of railway lines links the town with the rest of Britain.

The area combines the best of progressive industrial activity, pleasant dormitory housing developments, open spaces, parks and recreation grounds as well as countryside walks. It is the policy of the borough council to ensure that all possible facilities exist for the ratepayers as well as for the many visitors to the area. To enable the people of Warrington to make the most of its leisure time, be it sporting, cultural or other activities, there are various Leisure, Recreation and Community Centres, and appropriate accommodation to meet all requirements.

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:
Royal Leamington Spa MB, Warwick MB, Kenilworth UD, Warwick RD.

Royal Leamington Spa is a pleasant inland watering place situated in the centre of England. Date of Charter 1875. The town is well planned, being laid out on the grid system. It has spacious avenues and streets and first-class shopping and hotel facilities. The Royal Pump Room establishment, the property of the Council, plays a valuable part under the National Health Service Scheme in the treatment of rheumatism and kindred diseases.

There are ninety-four acres of public gardens, parks and ornamental grounds, including the celebrated Jephson Gardens, and excellent facilities for bowls, tennis and boating. The 309-acre Newbold Comyn Park caters for a variety of recreational activities, including an 18-hole Municipal Golf Course. The newly built Royal Spa Centre provides entertainments and conference facilities.

Warwick traces its municipal history back to the days of Edward the Confessor, the first Charter having been granted by Henry VIII, 15th May 1545. The Council maintains three pleasure grounds and St. Nicholas Park, a large public park and recreation ground on the banks of the River Avon, with river walk and promenade, adjacent to historic Warwick Castle. Other buildings of historic interest are—St. Mary's Church with Beauchamp Chapel, the latter containing the Vaults of the Earls of Warwick; Oken's House (now used as a doll museum); the Lord Leycester Hospital; and the East and West Gates. The town is famous for its architectural beauty and there are many fine examples dating back to the 16th century. Kenilworth is famous for its 12th-century Castle, visited by Queen Elizabeth I in 1575. Adjacent to the Castle are the Abbey Fields comprising 66 acres of parkland and recreational facilities open to the public.

Agencies. The following regional water authority function is carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Sewage.

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:
Godalming MB, Farnham UD, Haslemere UD, Hambledon RD.

The Council takes its name from an eleventh-century Cistercian Abbey on the borders of Tilford and Farnham, whose lands once stretched over a large part of the new district. The Abbey ruins are not open to the public at present, but are protected by the Department of the Environment.

The Waverley district includes four historic towns—Godalming, Farnham, Haslemere and the smaller town of Cranleigh—and many charming villages situated in some of the loveliest scenery in England.

A large part of the district is designated as Green Belt or Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, and contains the most extensive group of commons in Surrey, including Frensham Country Park. In the Haslemere area (500 feet above sea level, rising to over 800 feet at Hindhead) the National Trust owns over 500 acres and there are 195 acres of public open space. There are 45 commons in the Hambledon area, and at Farnham Park, a public open space of 200 acres, there is a nine-hole par 3 golf course.

A main attraction of the Haslemere district is its strong cultural tradition. It is the home of the Dolmetsch family who are famous for the revival of early music and musical instruments. The town also has an excellent educational museum which attracts visitors from all parts of the South East.

Godalming dates from Saxon times, and received its first Charter of Incorporation in 1575. Already known for its leather tanning industry, it also prospered considerably as an important centre of the Surrey cloth trade. The town lies across the River Wey, and Charterhouse School, which moved from London in 1872, stands on a commanding site overlooking the town.

Farnham is an area of ancient settlement and the town grew up in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries with the building of the Castle by Henry, Bishop of Winchester. It is the only town in Surrey included in the 1965 report of the Council of British Archaeology as having special historic quality, and the designated Conservation Area contains many buildings listed as being of architectural or historic interest.

The town has a lively repertory company which occupied the old Castle Theatre for many years, but has now been rehoused in the new Redgrave Theatre which opened in June 1974.

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

Bishop Auckland UD, Crook and Willington UD, Tow Law UD, Weardale RD.

The new boundaries extend from Bishop Auckland in the south to Edmundbyers in the north, west towards Nenthead and the border with Cumbria and east towards Spennymoor and Durham City. The area has easy access to travel arteries having a direct rail link from Bishop Auckland to Darlington where connections can be made to the London/Newcastle/Edinburgh Inter-City line and the area is also within easy reach of the A1(M) motorway.

Most of the towns and villages date from the 19th century with the opening up of many coal mines in the area. Since the cessation of coal mining and coke working the industrial dereliction left by the coal mining industry has been removed, the district has been transformed and its amenities greatly enhanced.

Wear Valley District, and particularly that part of the rural and industrial area of County Durham administered by the authority, belongs to all that is closely associated with England from the very earliest ages. The district has an ancient name which it derives from the River Wear. The Wear has for some time been generally recognised as the county's chief river, it has its source in the area and it runs roughly west to east for 27 miles or so and then continues for another 30 miles to reach the North Sea at Sunderland. It is a well known trout river and many pleasurable hours are spent by residents and visitors alike fishing in sometimes quiet, sometimes turbulent waters.

Situated in the south-west of the County of Durham, the Wear Valley District Council's administrative area covers 124,798 acres, much of which is rural in character and contains many places of exceptional scenic beauty. The industrial base of the whole district is divided between manufacturing and service industries in the Bishop Auckland, Crook and Willington areas in the east and mining, quarrying and agricultural in Weardale in the west. Much of the eastern part of the district was until quite recent times engaged in coal mining. Today, however, the mining industry has moved towards and along the coast; the industrial dereliction left by coal mining has been removed and other industries have established themselves and prospered.

Whilst the emphasis at this time is on new industrial development and expansion, it must not be forgotten that within the district there are three excellent trading estates owned and operated by the English Industrial Estates Corporation. These are situated at St. Helen Auckland, established in 1935, Greenfields founded in 1969 and New Road, Crook, founded in 1945 with 4 acres, extended by 8 acres in 1948 and 37 acres added in 1969. Much of the modern industry is concentrated on these industrial estates.

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

Welwyn Garden City UD, Hatfield RD, Welwyn RD.

The new district is unique in Britain in that it includes two designated new towns: Welwyn Garden City and Hatfield, in addition to large rural areas.

The southern part of the area lies within the metropolitan green belt, there are excellent road and rail communications, the trunk road A1(M) and the main London–Edinburgh railway line running through the district.

The council has had considerable agency functions delegated to it by the Hertfordshire county council and services large areas of playing fields and open spaces. Leisure facilities are numerous; amenities include a 120-acre park incorporating sailing and boating lakes and a heated open air swimming pool, a major social amenities centre "Campus West", with a discotheque, theatre, dance/multi-purpose hall, restaurants, bars, exhibition halls and private rooms for hire; the theatre is designated a regional film theatre. There is a country park of some 400 acres, a large indoor swimming pool, sports hall and an 18-hole municipal golf course. Future projects include the opening of a leisure centre at Hatfield.

Apart from considerable development by the former development corporation and the Commission for the New Towns, including factories, offices, shops and housing the council owns over 7,300 houses together with a municipal caravan park. Development in both the private and public sector of housing is continuing.

The new council aims at a progressive form of local government in order to serve well a community whose influence is felt in the fields of aviation, technology and pharmaceutical products.

Okehampton MB, Okehampton RD, Tavistock RD.

The district, geographically, is the largest in the county of Devon and one of the largest in the country. It is bounded on the west by the River Tamar which divides the counties of Devon and Cornwall. The district stretches from the outskirts of the city of Plymouth in the south for over 30 miles and the coastline and beaches of Devon and Cornwall both in the north and south are easily accessible.

The district is mainly agricultural (and predominantly pastoral) and includes many noted beauty spots. Probably nowhere else in the county can be seen such grandeur as is afforded by the lovely tors and ravines of the Dartmoor National Park, the major part of which is within the district, with picturesque valleys and hamlets in the richly wooded countryside.

The towns of Tavistock and Okehampton are the main residential areas, lying to the south and the north of the district respectively. Both provide perfect centres for visiting the many places of charm not only within the area of the district but also for the whole of the West Country.

Chairman's annual allowance: £500 plus £500 expenses allowance.

Bridport B, Dorchester B, Lyme Regis B, Sherborne U, Beaminster R, Bridport R, Dorchester R, Sherborne R.

The district covers 417 square miles bounded in the west, north and south by Devon, Somerset and the English Channel, which incorporates the Chesil Beach. Mainly rural in nature, the area includes five towns with many Neolithic, Stone Age, Iron Age and Roman settlements of which the gigantic prehistoric hill fortress of Maiden Castle is the finest example of its kind in Great Britain. An Iron Age settlement surmounts Pilsdon Pen (909 feet)—the highest point in Dorset—whilst Golden Cap (610 feet) is the highest cliff on the south coast.

Beaminster—even though the town suffered many disastrous fires in 1644, 1684 and 1781 there are many Georgian and older houses in existence.

Bridport—famous for its rope and net making; had its own mint from 978–1087. The town's first Charter was granted by Henry III in 1253 and Bridport elected two members of Parliament until 1868.

Dorchester—stands on the site of the Roman Durnovaria (AD 70); at Colliton Park are the foundations of a large Roman town house which was excavated in 1937–38. The Bloody Assize of 1685 was held here when the infamous Judge Jefferies was sent to the town to punish the Monmouth Rebels after the Battle of Sedgemoor.

The six Tolpuddle Martyrs were sentenced to seven years transportation for the "crime" of forming in their village the "Friendly Society of Agricultural Labourers", forerunner of the Trade Union Movement, at the Old Crown Court, now part of the Council's offices.

Lyme Regis—was for many centuries one of the most important ports of England, and its first Charter was granted by Edward I in 1284. In 1644 the town was besieged by the King's forces under Prince Maurice, and in June 1685 the Duke of Monmouth landed near the Cobb. The famous ichthysaurus fossil was discovered in the cliffs near the town by Mary Anning.

Sherborne—In AD 705 the Kingdom of Wessex was divided into two Dioceses and St. Aldhelm chose Sherborne as the site for his Cathedral. For nearly 400 years Saxon Bishops ruled from here, and Sherborne is dominated by the Abbey Church on the site of the Saxon Cathedral. Sherborne has two Castles, the first, of which the gatehouse, curtain walls, chapel, keep and domestic buildings remain, was built by Henry I's Chancellor, Bishop Roger (1107–1139); the present castle being built by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1594.

The Royal borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

Maidenhead MB, New Windsor MB, Eton UD, Cookham RD, Eton RD (parishes of Datchet, Horton, Wraysbury), Windsor RD.

The Royal borough includes two ancient boroughs each with its own tradition and history. Windsor is known throughout the world for its castle which has been a fortress and Royal residence for 850 years. This fact makes the town a major tourist attraction.

The area of the Royal Borough extends along both banks of the River Thames between Runnymede and Windsor and on the south bank of the Thames from Windsor to Hurley. This area includes Windsor Great Park, the Ascot racecourse, the castle and the town of Windsor, Eton with its famous college, Maidenhead, the villages of Cookham and Hurley, White Waltham and Waltham St. Lawrence.

Maidenhead is also well known because of its history and geographical position on one of the most beautiful stretches of the river Thames.

The whole of Eton town is a conservation area and there are significant areas of Windsor and Cookham similarly designated.

The district includes 420 acres of parks, open spaces and recreational grounds administered by the local authority. The district also enjoys extensive riverside frontage with associated amenity areas.

The Council plans to enhance the leisure and recreational facilities available within the area. A new sports and leisure centre costing £700,000 was completed in 1974.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,800.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

The county boroughs of Birkenhead and Wallasey.

In the administrative county of Chester:

the borough of Bebington;

the urban districts of Hoylake and Wirral.

The new Wirral district is situated on the Wirral Peninsula which is bounded by the River Mersey, the Irish Sea and the River Dee.

The area is an ideal blend of town, country and seaside, with a balanced industrial, maritime, agricultural and residential structure. A good labour market coupled with the excellent sites available offers a high potential for industrial and commercial expansion.

Whilst urban, industrial and commercial development is largely concentrated on the Mersey side of the peninsula, a considerable part of the area contains country parks, National Trust and rich farm lands interspersed with pleasant small towns and attractive villages. At the northern end of the peninsula, facing the Irish Sea, are the popular resorts of Hoylake and New Brighton; Deeside, with its sailing clubs and other amenities and peaceful, wide, tidal river overlooked by the Welsh Hills, provides a sharp contrast to the commercial bustle of the Mersey.

A good road network, including a new motor-way (M53) running down the spine of the Wirral and two road tunnels under the Mersey to Liverpool, provides the motorist with an ease of access not only within the area but also to North Wales, the Lake District, the Peak District and the Yorkshire Dales. A diesel and electric rail service connects most parts of the Wirral with Liverpool (by rail tunnel under the Mersey) and its inter city rail service and airport, whilst the Mersey ferries provide a convenient and pleasant service between Wallasey/Birkenhead and Liverpool.

Shopping facilities range from the larger centres in Birkenhead and Wallasey to more modest provision in the smaller towns and villages. There are excellent educational facilities, ranging from nursery schools to all aspects of further education; there is also a number of independent schools. Amenities within the area cater for all indoor and outdoor leisure pursuits and there is a wide range of residential property.

The borough comprises the area of the Woking UD which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

The borough of Woking lies about 25 miles south-west of London. It is primarily a residential area and contains over 1,000 acres of common land and open spaces. The area comprises the civil parishes of Woking (which includes Knaphill and Brookwood), Byfleet, Horsell and Pyrford, all of which have long associations with the past. All bring some special contribution to help make Woking popular and attractive. In addition there are a number of well established industries and four modern industrial estates in the district.

Very extensive redevelopment of the town centre has changed much of the face of the town. The 'all weather' shopping complex covers about 8½ acres and includes three major retail stores and seventy-four other shops. Three lifts link the shops with a multi-storey car park and this in turn is linked with the relief road which surrounds the town. Three other major features of the new town centre are the indoor pool; a complex of public halls which include a theatre and a banqueting and dinner dance suite; and the largest library in the county. There are further plans for the future. A new Divisional Police Headquarters and Magistrates' Courts are to be built on a site between the Centre Pool and the Centre Halls. New council offices also have a site and are at an advanced planning stage.

Another major development is the new Leisure Centre in Woking Park which has been designated as the sub-regional sports centre for Surrey. It includes seven squash courts, a projectile room and a covered 36·5 m × 32 m (120 ft. × 105 ft.) sports hall with a viewing gallery and is available for use as required for a variety of sports.

The council owns the council offices, public parks and pleasure grounds, allotments and car parks. A new private development covering some 500/600 acres which will ultimately house 14,000 people is now under construction at Goldsworth Park.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,375.

Superannuation Scheme administered by the Berkshire CC.

Agencies. The following county council and regional water authority functions are carried out by the district council on an agency basis: Highways; Planning; Sewerage Functions.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the Wokingham MB and Wokingham RD, which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

The River Loddon, which flows placidly through this rural district, is joined by the River Blackwater after its course along the Hampshire border. The deeply winding Thames forms the natural boundary of this rural district from Reading, around under the Chiltern Hills, past Henley to Remenham, where it provides some of the most contrasting scenic beauty in the south of England. Riverside villages such as Sonning and Wargrave are celebrated beauty spots. The regatta course, stretching below the steep and richly wooded hills between Henley and Remenham, is world renowned.

The scenery in the south of the rural district is also very beautiful although it lacks the constrasting charm of hills and water. Here are miles of most lovely woodlands, with undulating rides and high-set commons affording panoramic views, of which the best known is Finchampstead Ridges. Unlike The splendid beech-clad heights in the north, these are mixed woodlands where the remnants of the old royal chase of Windsor Forest are interspersed by scented pinewoods and extensive plantations of conifers. Many of the roads run through splendid avenues, of which the Wellingtonia Avenue at Finchampstead is perhaps the most impressive and all around are luxuriating rhododendrons which make a glorious display of colour in early summer.

The borough comprises the area of Wolverhampton CB which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

Wolverhampton is one of the principal manufacturing centres of the West Midlands, where industry and countryside meet. To the south-east is the industrial Black Country, while to the west, north and south lies beautiful countryside—Shropshire and Wales, agricultural Worcestershire and Staffordshire.

The town centre has been transformed in recent years by the building of two large traffic-free shopping precincts, and the pedestrianization of some of the main shopping streets.

On the cultural front, Wolverhampton possesses two museums and two art galleries, a live theatre, several cinemas, and the versatile civic hall. On the sporting front, too, facilities are wide and various.

The borough comprises the area of the former Worthing MB which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974.

The second largest town in Sussex and 58 miles from London, Worthing is a continually growing residential seaside resort situated on the South Coast at the foot of the Sussex Downs. Its original Charter was granted in 1890 when the area was 1,790 acres and the population 16,000. A new Charter was granted with effect from 1st April 1974 conferring borough status on the new Worthing District created by the Local Government Act 1972. The present day area is 8,513 acres and the population more than 90,000. With the surrounding rural area, it is a natural shopping centre for approximately 175,000 people. Worthing is noted for the mildness and equability of its climate and most of the town is situated on level ground.

The Guildbourn Shopping Centre, which adjoins the town's fourth multi-storey car park, comprises 36 shops on two levels, a public house, restaurant, supermarket, kiosks and offices. The new Central Library forms the headquarters of the south-east area of the West Sussex County Library Service and provides extensive reference and lending facilities together with a lecture theatre, meeting room and administrative accommodation.

There are five miles of gradually inclined beach giving safe sea bathing, and in addition to a heated outdoor swimming pool there is the Aquarena, a modern indoor swimming centre. The Council's trading undertakings include a catering department providing two licensed bars, and refreshments in municipal entertainment buildings.

The Pier, owned by the Borough Council, has a Pavilion at the northern end with a seating capacity of 870 and is used for concerts by the Municipal Orchestra, Summer Season stage entertainments, dancing and Winter productions. Adjacent to the Town Hall, which was opened in 1933, is the Assembly Hall used for meetings, banquets, dances, national conferences and choral and symphony concerts; seating capacity is 1,000 and refreshment facilities with licensed bar are available. In the adjoining Richmond Room there is an additional licensed bar. There is a Music Festival held annually in November. Worthing claims to be the only municipality in the country permanently maintaining an all-year-round Municipal Orchestra.

Within the Borough, the Council provides and maintains an area of approximately 950 acres open to the enjoyment of the population, and on the Downs the Council has acquired over 400 acres for preservation as public open space. Ornamental parks are distributed throughout the Borough with a total of over 100 acres, and a special feature is made of the town's floral displays. There is an 8½-acre boating lagoon, and sporting facilities include tennis, bowls, putting, pitch-and-putt, boating, riding, sailing and indoor bowling. There are three 18-hole golf courses in the town including a municipal course at Hill Barn.

Worthing's multi-purpose sports complex, one of the first in the South of England, caters for participants in a wide range of activities and with varying abilities from the enthusiastic beginner to the experienced international. Facilities include large sports hall, squash courts, rifle and archery range, practice hall, weight training room, cafeteria, bar and social facilities.

WREXHAM MAELOR (W)

Borough (Clwyd)

Elections will be of whole council.

Pop., 108,100; RV, £9,450,108; Rate, 97·1p to 99·1p; Debt, £35,723,498; Area, 90,567 Ac.

Baths and Pools: 2; Cemeteries: 2; Crematorium: 1; Council Houses and Flats: 17,004; Markets: 6; Parks and Open Spaces: 600 acres.

Parliamentary Constituencies (2): Wrexham, East Flint.

Regional Water Authority: Welsh National Water Development Authority.

Superannuation Scheme administered by Clwyd CC.

Audit by District Auditor.

DEFINITION OF AREA
The borough comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

In the administrative county of Denbigh:
  the borough of Wrexham;
  the rural district of Wrexham (part).
In the administrative county of Flintshire:
  the rural district of Maelor;
  in the rural district of Hawarden, the parish of Marford and Hoseley.

The Wrexham Maelor area can justifiably claim to have some of the finest scenery that Wales has to offer. Visitors will find that its 90,000 acres provide an unrivalled blend of thriving and expanding urban, commercial and industrial development with large areas of outstanding natural beauty. Indeed, one of its principal attractions is that it offers a scenic paradise on the very doorstep of its houses and factories. For those wishing to venture further afield, it provides a convenient and interesting starting off point for touring with direct and easy access to the beaches, rivers, lakes and mountains of North Wales and the Snowdonia National Park.

As to the future, there is every reason to forecast with confidence that the area will rapidly increase in size and importance during the next decade or so. The past few years have witnessed a significant change in the industrial character of the region with an encouraging inflow of a wide variety of new factories compensating for the decline in the older traditional extractive industries such as coal-mining and brickmaking. There is every indication that expansion will make the Wrexham area one of the most important industrial regions of Wales.

Wrexham Maelor is well located for this kind of industrial growth, offering good industrial estates and having good communications with the north-west and the Midlands. It is listed as a development area and full advantage has been taken of this special status to attract a variety of industries to compensate for the decline in the more traditional industry.

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 1st April 1974:

High Wycombe MB, Marlow UD, Wycombe RD.

Situated in the south-east of the district, High Wycombe lies 29 miles north-west of London, 26 miles south-east of Oxford, 10 miles north of Maidenhead and 17 miles south of the county town of Aylesbury. A completed section of the M40 motorway London to Oxford passes through the district; and the Marlow by-pass links the M40 at Handy Cross with the M4 near Maidenhead. There are comprehensive train, bus and coach services throughout the district. Although the district includes the urban areas of High Wycombe, Marlow, Bourne End and Princes Risborough, a large proportion is rural, set in the Chilterns, a designated area of outstanding natural beauty, with extensive beechwoods and some of the most celebrated reaches of the Thames, from Henley past Hambleden, Medmenham and Marlow to Bourne End and Hedsor. The area is rich in history; pre-historic relics, bronze and iron age burial mounds and earthworks have been discovered, and many local places are mentioned in the Norman Domesday Book.

Bewdley MB, Kidderminster MB, Stourport-on-Severn UD, Kidderminster RD.

The Wyre Forest District Council has been formed by the amalgamation of the boroughs of Kidderminster and Bewdley, the urban district of Stourport-on-Severn and the rural district of Kidderminster. Kidderminster is an industrial town with the manufacture of carpets as the staple industry. Both Stourport-on-Severn and Bewdley have extensive frontages to the river Severn with facilities for boating, sailing and fishing. A substantial part of the Wyre Forest is within the new district as is also a large part of the Kingsford Country Park. There are therefore extensive recreation and leisure areas within the district, serving the industrial and commuter population. The centre of the ancient borough of Bewdley and the canal basin at Stourport-on-Severn are conservation areas. The river Stour and part of the Staffordshire and Worcestershire Canal both run through the district and join the river Severn at Stourport-on-Severn.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,320.

The County Council reserves the right to itself undertaking any schemes of highway construction or improvement estimated to cost in excess of £100,000 (excluding land costs), or any new road bridge.

The sewerage function encompassing the repair and maintenance of public sewers and the design and construction of new sewers necessary effectually to serve the area.

The city comprises York CB which ceased to exist on 1st April, 1974.

In 1971, York celebrated 1,900 years of recorded history, having been founded by the Romans in AD 71, when Petilius Cerealis built a legionary fortress at the junction of the rivers Ouse and Foss.

The important medieval guilds, including the Merchant Adventurers and the Merchant Taylors, whose guildhalls still remain, were responsible for the annual presentation of the cycle of mystery plays performed on wagons which moved around the city. These plays in a modern version were revived in 1951, and are still performed against the splendid background of the ruined St. Mary's Abbey, as part of the triennial festival of the Arts.

York retains so many historic buildings, of which about 850 are listed, and has now become a major centre for international tourism. Visitors flock to see its ancient walls, streets, bars, churches, guildhalls and castle. The glorious Minster, the largest Gothic church in England, built between 1220 and 1472, was restored at a cost of over £2,000,000, in time for its five-hundredth anniversary in 1972. The ancient Guildhall was destroyed in an air raid in 1942, but has been rebuilt and was re-opened in 1960.

The coming of the railways in the nineteenth century made York a major transport centre. Today the city is still the headquarters of the Eastern Region of British Railways. The University of York opened in 1963 and is now a flourishing institution.

The principal industries are the manufacture of chocolate and sugar confectionery, optical instruments, glass containers, shock absorbers and railway carriages.

The Strays, covering 818 acres, are held by the Council as Trustees for the Freemen of certain Wards and are managed by the Council. They include the famous Knavesmire, where horse-racing has taken place since 1731. The city has also five parks and many gardens.

The omnibus system is jointly operated by the Council and the West Yorkshire Road Car Company. The Council also controls the navigation on the rivers Ouse and Foss.

The Castle Museum is one of the most successful folk museums of the world, and attracts many thousands of visitors annually. The Yorkshire Museum of archaeology and natural history has also a national reputation for its unique specimens and the Art Gallery boasts a fine collection of works of art representative of all the major schools of European painting. The new National Railway Museum opened in York during 1975.

At Norwest Holst we give each project individual attention.

Companies within the group are especially concerned with civil and structural engineering, building, excavation, site investigation, pipe and mainlaying, structural steelwork, structural timber, housing, developing, plant installations and plant hire.

So whatever the project we have the expertise and the ability to do it ourselves from soil testing to completion.

On more complex operations the various enterprises of the group are integrated under central management to ensure interchange of expertise and highly efficient liaison.

It's an important part of what we call our total capability.

LOCAL COUNCILS IN ENGLAND AND WALES

The Local Government Act 1972 makes the following provisions regarding parish and community councils.

England

For every parish there is a parish meeting to discuss parish affairs. Parish councils in being before 1st April 1974 continued and 296 boroughs and urban districts became parishes on that day.

If a parish has no parish council, the district council must (and if the parish is grouped under a common parish council, may) establish a separate parish council for that parish:

(a) if the population includes 200 or more local government electors or

(b) where the population includes 150–200 local government electors, if the parish meeting so resolves.

If the electorate is not more than 150, the district council may

(a) establish a separate parish council if the parish meeting so resolves;

(b) dissolve the parish council at the request of the parish meeting; if rejected a further application is barred for two years.

The above procedures are subject to a Review of Parish Boundaries, and the Local Government Boundary Commission expects to be ready to deal with proposals affecting parishes from late 1977 or early 1978. The Minister for Planning and Local Government has told the House of Commons that District Councils would be asked in the first place to review the pattern of parishes and make recommendations, and they would be provided in good time with guidelines.

A district council may, if requested, order the grouping of parishes under a common parish council, or dissolve a group and it fixes the number of councillors for each parish.

A parish council consists of the chairman and not less than five councillors, and elections will be held in 1976, 1979 and every fourth year thereafter. The term of office will be four years, but three years for councillors elected in 1976.

Parish councils may provide or maintain shelters, clocks, village halls, playing fields, gymnasiums, open spaces and camping sites; baths, washhouses and bathing places; allotments, war memorials, street lighting, car parks, burial grounds, certain public improvements such as public walks, roadside verges, playgrounds, seats, litter bins, and wcs. Important duties are assigned to parish councils in connection with public footpaths and churchyards. Lately they have made enterprising and widespread use of their power of discretionary expenditure under s. 137 of the 1972 Act. Parish councils also administer or are concerned in the administration of tens of thousands of local charities (other than ecclesiastical and eleemosynary charities). They are also the custodians of parochial public documents; in addition to the foregoing they have miscellaneous powers relating to the prevention of unlawful inclosure of common land, obstruction of rights of way and the regulation of recreation grounds, village greens, open spaces and public walks. In addition all planning applications must be notified to them and they must be consulted on the making of certain types of byelaws.

Every parish in England must have a Parish Meeting which all the local government electors in the parish are entitled to attend. If there is a council for the parish, the Parish Meeting must meet at least once a year between 1st March and 1st June; its main function is to discuss parish affairs. Most of its legal powers have been abolished.

If there is no Parish Council the Parish Meeting is the local government authority for the parish but with restricted powers, and it must assemble at least twice a year. In such a parish the chairman of the Parish Meeting and the proper officer of the District Council are a body corporate known as "The Parish Trustees". They must in all respects act as directed by the Parish Meeting.

Wales

Since 1st April, 1974 every district consists of one or more areas called "communities", namely the boroughs, urban districts and rural parishes existing before that date together with six small special areas. A community council was established, in place of every parish council, and for these 90 ex-urban communities whose urban councils so requested.

Community councils could not however be established in Cardiff, Merthyr Tydfil, Newport, Port Talbot, Rhondda and Swansea. The Special Community Review now being conducted by the Local Government Boundary Commission for Wales, for a revision of community geography and the creation of community councils in those expected boroughs will be complete by the autumn of 1977.

A community council consists of the chairman and community councillors and elections will take place in 1979 and every fourth year thereafter. The term of office is four years except those elected in 1974.

In functions and other respects community councils are very similar to parish councils in England, but community meetings have no permanent chairman or obligation to meet annually, and there is no equivalent to the parish trustees.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF LOCAL COUNCILS

The National Association of Local Councils is a federation of county associations formed in 1947 to promote the interests and privileges of local, that is to say parish and community councils; to foster the co-operation of these councils with other local authorities and voluntary organizations; to assist local councils in the performance of their duties; to make available to them opportunities for securing information and literature and for meeting together in conference; generally to develop social, cultural and recreational life in all villages and to promote good local government. It provides its member councils with a variety of services such as advice and information, and it publishes handbooks and a quarterly journal The Local Council Review.

OFFICERS OF THE ASSOCIATION

President of the Association: His Grace the Duke of Grafton, KG. Vice Presidents: The Rt. Hon. Earl of Kinnoull, FLAS, The Rt. Hon. Lady Phillips, Dr. Edmund Marshall, MP, The Hon. C. Morrison, MP, A. Beith, MP, N. Winterton, MP, I. Davies, MP, Prof Bryan Keith-Lucas. Chairman of the Council: J. F. Montgomery. Secretary: Charles Arnold-Baker, OBE. Deputy Secretary: John Clark. Treasurer: J. Seale, 100 Great Russell Street, London, WC1B 3LD (01-636 4066).

The addresses of the County Associations are set out under each County listing of parishes in this Section, and the names and addresses of clerks to parish councils, town councils and parish meetings in England, and to community councils in Wales may be obtained from the Secretary of the particular County Association or from the County Council.

ASSOCIATION OF CHARTER TRUSTEES

Town Hall, Burton upon Trent, Staffs. (B.u.T. 5369 ext. 42).

Chairman: Coun. J. W. Parker.
Secretary: Coun. Mrs. G. E. Haynes.

Objects

(a) To protect and further the interest of Charter Trustees insofar as they may be effected by legislation or proposed legislation or otherwise.

(b) To press Her Majesty's Government to confer upon Charter Trustees permanent status with defined powers.

(c) To provide such central services for Charter Trustees as may be considered appropriate.

Further information on FORMER BOROUGHS WHICH ARE NOW TOWNS WITH CHARTER TRUSTEES can be found in Section 34.

TOWN COUNCILS

Section 245(6) of the Local Government Act 1972 provides that:

The council of a parish or community which is not grouped with any other parish or community may resolve that the parish or community shall have the status of a town and thereupon—

(a) The council of the parish or community shall bear the name of the council of the town;

(b) The chairman and vice-chairman of the council shall be respectively entitled to the style of town mayor and deputy town mayor;

(c) The parish meeting or a community meeting shall have the style of town meeting.

The following lists give such details as could be ascertained by parish councils in England and community councils in Wales which have adopted town status, including the name and address of the clerk of the council. The change of status does not confer additional powers.

The names of parish and community councils which have been granted city status will be found under "Cities" in Section 34.

The Act does not require a parish or community council to notify any official body of its change of status and the lists may therefore be incomplete.

PARISHES IN ENGLAND

The Editor is pleased to re-introduce a lis of parishes in England, after a lapse of three years following the reorganization of local government in England and Wales in 1974. Whilst in this edition our list is not complete for the whole of England, the Editor is confident that in the following edition the Municipal Year Book will once more be the only source for a comprehensive list of all the parishes in England.

At this stage the parishes are set down so far as possible in a County and District area basis, and the name of the Secretary of the County Branch of the National Association of Local Councils is quoted as being the source of information. The Editor acknowledges the willing co-operation of the Association's Secretary and of the County Branch Secretaries in the preparation of this section of the Municipal Year Book.

All these parishes have a parish council or are in a group/joint parish council, except where the letters PM indicate that there is a Parish Meeting only as the local government authority for the parish within the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1972. Some parishes have resolved under Section 245(6) of this Act to have the status of a town, and below these parishes are noted with the letters TC.

These details on a district council basis will be corrected each year by any changes arising from Government reviews of parish boundaries.

SECTION 36

DEVELOPMENT CORPORATIONS

And Commission for the New Towns

In 1945 the Minister of Town and Country Planning and the Secretary of State for Scotland appointed a Committee to consider the general questions of the establishment, development, organization and administration that would arise in the promotion of New Towns in furtherance of a policy of planned decentralization from congested urban areas. The Committee was asked to suggest guiding principles on which such towns should be established and developed as self-contained and balanced communities for work and living. Within twelve months the Committee submitted three reports (two interim and a final) covering every aspect of the planning and development of new towns.

Many of the Committee's recommendations were embodied in the New Towns Act 1946. This measure dealt with the setting up of Development Corporations by the Minister, powers of the Corporation, designation of sites for new towns, and other matters with which the Corporations are concerned. The Act also determined how the Corporations were to be financed and how they were to be wound up when their main work is done. Section 15 of the Act clearly contemplated the transfer of a new town to the local authority when the purpose for which it was established had been substantially achieved. Nevertheless in the New Towns Act 1959 the Government decided that the new towns were not to be absorbed in the local government system but should be transferred to the Commission for the New Towns when their purposes had been substantially achieved. The New Towns Act 1946 and most of the subsequent legislation relating to new towns have been incorporated in the New Towns Act 1965. At the time of going to press the New Towns (Amendment) Bill 1976 had had its third reading in the Second House, and, if it becomes law, will provide for the transfer to district councils of the ownership of rented dwellings and related assets held by development corporations and the Commission for the New Towns.

There are now 28 New Towns in Britain and the first generation of 12 are now well advanced towards completion. Eight of the towns—Basildon (Essex), Bracknell (Berkshire), Crawley (Sussex), Harlow (Essex), Hatfield (Herts.), Hemel Hempstead (Herts.), Stevenage (Herts.), and Welwyn Garden City (Herts.)—lie in open country twenty to thirty miles from London. Their special purpose is to provide homes with work near at hand for some half a million people who would otherwise be living in crowded conditions in London or travelling long distances to work. In recent years three more New Towns have been designated to take people from London: Milton Keynes, in North Bucks., Northampton and Peterborough. These will be much bigger—with populations of between 175,000 and 250,000—than the earlier New Towns and the expansion of substantial existing towns is involved at Northampton and Peterborough.

Three other New Towns—Aycliffe and Peterlee in County Durham, and Corby in Northamptonshire—offer solutions to problems created by the particular needs of local industry. Skelmersdale in Lancashire and Runcorn in Cheshire are taking families from Merseyside, and Warrington, serving Manchester, is to be expanded to a population of nearly 200,000. Telford in Shropshire and Redditch in Worcestershire are taking families from Birmingham and the Black Country, and Washington, in the new county of Tyne and Wear, does the same for the Tyneside/Wearside area. The Central Lancashire New Town, which will have a population of 420,000, is to act as a growth point in Lancashire's economic revival, besides providing for long term overspill requirements and the region's growth in population.

In Wales, Cwmbran, in Gwent, serves local industry, and Newtown, in Powys, will contribute to the economic growth of central Wales. The six Scottish New Towns—Cumbernauld, East Kilbride, Glenrothes, Irvine, Livingstone and Stonehouse, which was designated in August 197e—are mainly designed to relieve overcrowding in Glasgow.

This section also makes reference to two projects which, although not development corporations within the context of the New Towns Acts, are of sufficient magnitude to justify inclusion.

Bracknell—a small market centre west of London, with a population of 5,000 when designated—has now exceeded the target population of the first stage of its development, namely 25,000, the present total being 43,000. As a result of an extension of the area to 3,285 acres, the target population is now 60,000. The area will be encircled by a belt of countryside devoted to agriculture and forestry and separated from the development of Greater London by such permanent open spaces as Ascot Heath, Windsor Great Park and Virginia Water.

By 31st March 1976, 11,690 dwellings had been completed in the designated area, 10,446 of which had been built by the Corporation. 240,111 sq. metres of industrial development for both manufacturing and service industry had been completed together with 98,124 sq. metres of lettable office space, 51,637 sq. metres of lettable retail floor space and 70 market stalls. There are twelve new churches, six community centres and three youth centres in use. Twenty two schools (including three comprehensives and one special school) provide some 10,420 places and a College of Further Education is attended by a total of 10,657 students, approximately 500 of whom study on a full time basis. An additional school and community centre are under construction. The District Council's Sports Centre, which incorporates a swimming pool complex, is used for a great many activities including international sporting events. South Hill Park Trust operates a very successful Arts Centre incorporating cinema, theatre, recital room, studios and craft workshops.

During the financial year 1975/76 contracts have been let for 817 dwellings and 128 flats (including shops), by the Corporation. Three multi-storey car parks are now in use.

An area of approximately 35,000 acres of land, including the towns of Preston, Chorley and Leyland was designated in April, 1970, and the Development Corporation was established in 1971. The task of the Development Corporation is to create a focal growth point for the North-West region and to enhance environment of the whole area. In doing this it is estimated that the present population of the designated area will rise from approximately 235,000 to 420,000 by the turn of the century.

The designated area enjoys a superb strategic location lying astride the M6 motorway and with the M61 motorway providing part of the eastern boundary. It is also astride the London and Glasgow main railway line. The area is also fortunate in having its own port at Preston dock.

The Corporation has recently produced its Outline Plan, which is now available from the above address at a cost of £6·50 including postage and packing.

Corby was designated a New Town on 1st April 1950 and the Development Corporation was established on 10th May of the same year. The area designated was about 2,700 acres with a population at that time of about 15,000. The Corporation's target was to be a population of 40,000 with natural growth continuing thereafter by a further 15,000. In 1960, however, it transpired that the main industry of the town, the steelworks, was to expand further. To meet the requirements of the projected population increase, the Minister of Housing and Local Government enlarged the Designated Area in 1963 by some 1,600 acres to the south of the town, and the Designated Area is now capable of accommodating 83,000 persons. In late 1968, a further area of about 130 acres especially suitable for industry was designated. The Corporation's Master Plan for the extension area and for the necessary expansion of the town centre for the larger population was submitted to the Minister of Housing and Local Government in July 1965, and received approval in principle the following year. The present population is about 53,000.

With some 16,042 houses now occupied, the town has passed its first stage of housing growth; and the Town Centre, commenced in 1954, is now completed to the stage for which it was first planned. As well as some 110 shops it includes a forty-bedroom hotel, library, police station, courthouse, technical college, ten-pin bowling centre, central health clinic, bus station and the civic centre buildings of the District Council. These comprise a covered swimming bath, theatre, dance/concert hall, civic offices and council chamber. In 1969 work commenced on a major extension to the town centre which was completed in 1972, with nearly half as many additional shops, a multi-storey car park for 600 cars, a new covered bus station, and a further 100,000 sq. ft. of lettable office space has been added to the 103,000 sq. ft. of offices which have already been built to meet both the local needs and the requirements of an increasing number of national firms who find the benefit of location in an expanding Midlands town, which is only about 80 miles from Central London. At that date, the whole of the shopping area, new and existing, became all pedestrian.

Concurrently, with the development of housing and the town centre, many new schools, churches, public houses and new roads have been built for the needs of this young and lively population; and with them some 56 new factories to provide work, partly as an alternative for men, but hitherto mainly for women and girls whose menfolk are employed at the steelworks. However, with the nationalization of the steel industry, and new methods of working to reduce manpower, the expected expansion of the steelworks has been cancelled and for the first time in its history, the Corporation is having to find other employment each year for the majority of its incoming factory workers. In June 1967, negotiations were concluded with the Greater London Council for Corby to participate in the London Overspill Industrial Selection Scheme. Further land has been set aside for new industries, and the stage is set for a major industrial expansion independent of the steel industry.

Milton Keynes lies alongisde the M1 Motorway, 50 miles from Central London and 60 miles from Birmingham: the Grand Union Canal and the London/Crewe main line railway both pass through the area. The local authority is the Milton Keynes Borough Council.

Milton Keynes has a first class location and provides an attractive alternative, in both homes and employment, to the pressures of the Greater London area which it was designated to relieve. Development is progressing rapidly and construction of the first phase of the new city centre is well under way. The existing population of the area is over 70,000, the largest settlement being in Bletchley with a population of over 30,000. The new city will accomodate an incoming population of 150,000 by about 1990; the total population will be about 250,000 by AD 2000.

The Plan for Milton Keynes was published by the Development Corporation in March 1970. Following a public inquiry the Plan was accepted by the Secretary of State in May 1971.

The new town of Peterlee is situate mid-way between the Tees and the Wear. The original designated area of 2,350 acres, extended by a further 449 acres, occupies the heart of the Easington District which is one of the largest in the country and has a population of 82,000 people. It is in relation to this scattered pattern that Peterlee is being planned.

Peterlee was designated on a green-field site to provide modern homes for the miners of the surrounding pit villages; a commercial, social and recreational centre for the sub-region and employment for the wives and families of miners. With the decline in the coal industry in the early 1960s the employment emphasis changed to providing jobs for the men in the region.

By March 1975, over 8,000 dwellings, 157 shops, one residential hotel, six public houses, three licensed clubs, one grammar+technical school, 17 primary and three comprehensive schools, one technical college, one sports and social centre and four churches dedicated for worship were completed. Secondary modern schools in the town are being extended along comprehensive lines.

A striking feature of the town is the South West Area; this area forms an urban layout recognizing the effect of the motor car in the present age, carefully integrated with a rural landscape of great beauty and has aroused favourable comment in architectural circles. The area was designed by artist Victor Pasmore.

In the town centre a fire station, library, health centre, post office, youth club, divisional police station, petty sessional court, telephone exchange, two filling stations, public conveniences, pedestrian underpasses, a total of 122 shops, a car showroom, nightclub premises, an arts and information centre, a multi-storey car park and a five-storey office block have been completed. An ambulance depot and a children's day nursery are in use and an Aged Persons Hostel has been opened through the agency of the Durham County Council. A new 68,000 sq. ft. department store and 36,000 sq. ft. office development was completed in 1975 in the town centre. Plans are also under discussion for the establishment of an Arts and Humanities complex within the town as an essential analogue to the creation of a technologically-based Research and Development base which is to be constructed as part of an aim to establish Peterlee as the Science Centre for the Region. A swimming pool with sauna and solarium facilities has been completed as the first stage of the development of this complex. A community hall, theatre, cinema and sports centre are planned for the future.

Thirty four industries provide employment for over 4,600 people on the two industrial estates. In all 2,150,854 sq. ft. of factory space is in use. Companies range from food, clothing and service industries employing two women to one man to chemical and engineering with labour forces of seven men to one woman. Industry has been attracted from elsewhere in the U.K. and in the last two years from Italy, Japan, Germany and the U.S.A. I.B.M.(U.K.) Ltd. have established a scientific centre involved in research and development.

A Community Association has been established and one large community centre and two neighbourhood centres have been provided by the Development Corporation to meet the needs of the 26,500 population.

Cwmbran is the first new town to be established in Wales and Gwent.

The master plan for the new town was approved by the Minister in 1951, and has proved a sound foundation upon which to base the progessive development of the town.

At April 1975, 8,325 dwellings had been completed including 1,013 (sold) and the Corporation had also leased 509 plots to private householders.

The present population is about 44,000 and the remaining residential development is taking place in the south-western area of the town. The Welsh Office has instructed the Corporation to continue development beyond its erstwhile target of 45,000, within the limits of the present designated area. The Corporation has submitted a proposal to the Welsh Office for an expansion to the south-west and south of the town.

Engineering projects include river, railway and canal crossings for principal roads. Two river bridges, five railway bridges and two canal crossings have been completed.

The dual carriageway by-pass road for Trunk Road A4042 has been constructed on the easterly side of the town. This new length of road is designed to link up in due course with the M5 (Midlands) motorway, and the M4 (South Wales) Motorway.

Development is proceeding in the town centre where pedestrian shopping is a feature and canopies protect shoppers against bad weather. Extensive free car parks, including two multi-storey and one underground, have so far been provided and the Corporation aims at an ultimate total of 4,000 free parking spaces. The first 157 shops, banks, etc., including the head post office, a large department store and a multiple stores block are complete. The new police sub-divisional headquarters and the new Magistrates' Court are now operational. The centre possesses Wales's tallest residential building—a 22-storey block of flats and a large district heating plant situated near its base will serve most of the town centre. Work is completed on the construction of the town centre's largest building on eight floors, providing more shops, a county library, a theatre/concert hall and some 60,000 sq. ft. of lettable offices. The central bus station was brought into use in 1964. A large office block for the South Wales Electricity Board and the central health clinic are in use. The plan includes provision for a hotel, and further office development; 68 shops have been completed in the various residential neighbourhoods. A modern social club has been built in the town centre for the town's largest industry. A three-cinema complex and social hall are now complete and operational (in town centre). A store of 100,000 sq. ft. for Woolco' has been completed and is now trading, this being on top of a multi-storey car park for 900 vehicles. Sainsbury are well advanced with the construction of their first store in Wales. This will have a multi-storey car park on top of the store. Marks & Spencer are also now building a large store in the centre.

Gwent County Council are now occupying their new headquarters at Cwmbran, this building adjoining the existing new headquarters of the Gwent Constabulary at Croesyceiliog.

An Arts Trust has been formed with the support of local industrialists to sponsor the provision of tangible works of art for the public benefit of the town. The Corporation has established a "home for the arts" and societies meeting place in the town centre and has built a community building in the Fairwater area for the local residents' association. Three new social halls have been completed at Hollybush, Greenmeadow and Llanyravon.

In addition to the 1,500,000 sq. ft. of industry employing 6,800 persons and established prior to the designation of the new town, the Development Corporation has since provided 1,248,063 sq. ft. of new industry and 5,530 new jobs. Large-scale industrial development is still proceeding.

The Gwent County Council's school building programme has kept pace with the developments. A grammar school, three secondary modern schools, and nineteen primary schools have been completed. The grammar school and one of the secondary modern schools form, with their playing fields, a "campus" occupying a commanding position overlooking the river. These have now become one bilateral school and the town's first fully comprehensive school at Fairwater is now operational. Comprehensive schools have full-scale leisure centres, available to the public out of school hours.

Two Methodist churches, a Roman Catholic church and one for the Assemblies of God have been built, these being additional to a number of existing churches in older parts of the town.

There are three "community Colleges" for adult use attached to schools. There are also active community associations and the Corporation have co-operated with them in the erection of local meeting halls. The Corporation are sponsoring or otherwise assisting in the formation of new societies and associations. Five nursery play groups, for children under school age, have so far been established. Torfaen Borough and Cwmbran Development Corporation have equally shared the cost of providing a 4½-acre boating lake at the southern end of the central recreation area.

The Local Authority has built a sports stadium on Henllys Way which is the only one in Wales to have track and jump facilities to full international standards. It also incorporates indoor swimming pool, sports hall, sauna suite, etc.

The first purpose-built police training centre, serving the whole of Wales, is now fully operational at Greenmeadow.

Nine new public houses have been completed and further new licensed premises will be erected as the town grows. Unique in Wales, a combined public house and community centre has been completed at the Fairwater Square shopping centre. A new residential hotel has opened at Llanyravon.

The new town is located in the area of the new Torfaen Borough Council, which also embraces Pontypool and Blaenavon to the north.

General: East Kilbride, the first of the Scottish new towns, became a small Burgh on 16th May 1963, and a large Burgh on 15th May 1967. It became part of the East Kilbride District of Strathclyde Region in May 1975 as a result of the reorganization of local government in Scotland.

The town is situated in the Clyde Valley region, about nine miles south of Glasgow. It was established with the aim of easing Glasgow's post-war housing problem and of broadening the economy of the West of Scotland, previously dependent on the traditional "heavy" industries of coal mining, shipbuilding and engineering. Industrial and commercial expansion in the town has been so successful, however, that East Kilbride is now recognized as the foremost growthpoint in Scotland.

The area designated as the site of the new town extends to 10,250 acres, of which some 5,700 acres will remain as a green belt to the north-west of a built-up area of about 4,550 acres. More than 21,000 Development Corporation dwellings were completed and occupied at 31st March 1976. This figure includes nearly 2,400 houses in the new residential area of Greenhills, where approximately 570 further houses were under construction at the same date. The Greenhills development, which will provide a total of 3,000 houses, is due to be completed early 1977.

At the time of designation the original village of East Kilbride had a population of 2,400, with about 300 employed in manufacturing. East Kilbride is now the sixth largest town or city in Scotland, with a population of nearly 75,000 and 800 acres of industrial estates accommodating 312 manufacturing and service firms in a total factory space of 593,900 sq. m. Total employment in the town at the end of December 1975 was 31,500, of which 18,791 were in industry.

To meet the continuing demand for industrial space in the town the Development Corporation had in hand a programme for 92,000 sq. ft. of factories to be completed during 1976.

The Birniehill site, covering 71 acres, is occupied by the National Engineering Laboratory, the Government's mechanical engineering research and development establishment for the whole of the United Kingdom, together with the Birniehill Institute, which organizes regular conferences on the work carried out by the NEL for industry; and by the Scottish Universities Research Reactor Centre, the Scottish laboratory of the Building Research Establishment, the Property Services Agency of the Department of the Environment, and the Scottish branch of the Warren Spring Laboratory of the Department of Trade and Industry. Between them they occupy 640,000 sq. ft. of laboratory buildings.

With the completion of the £10 million Plaza development the 60-acre town centre area now has 122 shops and 600,700 sq. ft. of office accommodation. The Plaza, a complex of stores, shops, tower office block and a multi-storey car park with free parking for 1,250 cars, represents the third and most extensive stage of town centre development, and has elevated East Kilbride to the status of a truly regional shopping centre.

Atholl House, a separate office block of approximately 60,000 sq. ft. close to the town centre, became the new headquarters building of the Development Corporation in February 1975.

Also situated in the town centre is the Inland Revenue multi-storey Computer Centre–Centre 1 - which handles the PAYE system for the whole of Scotland. There are two residential hotels, a ballroom, a cinema seating 1,000, an Olympic-length swimming pool, the Civic Centre housing the headquarters of East Kilbride District Council, and a youth centre, health centre, Crown post office, a police headquarters, fire station and library. A third hotel and a conference centre are planned.

Six neighbourhood shopping centres are trading. In addition, sixteen small groups of shops have been built.

Four secondary schools and 21 primary schools have been completed. Another two secondary schools and a further five primary schools are envisaged. Seventeen new churches have been added to the three which existed before designation, and three more were under construction in March 1976.

Four large public recreation areas are equipped with tennis courts, football pitches, rugby pitch, cricket pitch, bowling greens, running track and appropriate pavilions. The facilities also include a nine hole pitch and-put course. There are four golf courses (three private and one municipal), a large indoor sports centre which was built by the Town Council, and a private sports club. The Town Centre Park contains a boating pond, a paddling pool and Himalayan putting green.

Stonehouse: Stonehouse was designated Scotland's sixth new town in August 1973 with the aim of being developed primarily for attracting or retaining employment in West Central Scotland.

The designated area extends to 2,739 hectares (6,765 acres) and includes the existing villages of Stonehouse, Blackwood and Kirkmuirhill, with a population of about 7,600. The area is located in open country just south of the Clydeside Conurbation and is strategically situated astride the M74 Motorway, the main road link with the South.

A Basic Plan for the New Town prepared by the Development Corporation has provided a management framework for planning and development over the life of the town. The first step towards the preparation of the Basic Plan was the publication of the Stonehouse Outline Plan in April 1974. This set out the results of preliminary studies and the initial ideas of the Corporation for public discussion. The Outline Plan envisaged the development of the new town as a series of villages with emphasis on public transport linking the residential areas and the major industrial area of Canderside, which lies adjacent to the Motorway.

Further studies in depth were being carried out as indicated in Basic Plan 1 and related proposals, which were published in May, 1975. These proposals placed the first housing and industrial developments within the context of the overall Basic Plan. In the case of industry they involve the development of 21 hectares of land for advance factories and 33 hectares for purpose-built units at Canderside. The first housing developments, comprising nearly 1,000 dwellings, are proposed as an extension of Stonehouse village. Within two years of designation, construction started on first housing and first industry sites. The first 96 new homes are now completed and occupied.

Enquiries: Enquiries from industrialists and developers of commercial and retail properties are welcomed and should be addressed to the Managing Director.

The town occupies a central position in the Kingdom of Fife. On 30th June 1948, 5,760 acres of land were designated for development. There was an existing population within this area of approximately 1,150 persons.

The purpose of Glenrothes New Town is to extend the industrial belt of Scotland eastwards to assist in dealing with unemployment problems in the area and to participate to a certain extent in overspill population from Glasgow. The minimum target population is at present 55,000 with natural growth thereafter to 70,000.

Glenrothes has ample industrial land available for development. There are 5 major industrial estates:

1. Queensway Industrial Estate of approximately 45 acres at present accommodating 40 industries.
2. Viewfield Industrial Estate of approximately 112 acres and accommodating 8 industries.
3. Eastfield Industrial Estate of approximately 93 acres and accommodating 25 industries.
4. Southfield Industrial Estate of approximately 414 acres accommodating 9 industries.
5. Whitehill Industrial Estate of approximately 54 acres accommodating 44 industries.

The sites are adjacent to housing and shopping and give easy access to road, rail, sea and air communications.

The population of the New Town (December 1975) was 32,000 with 9,658 houses completed. The factories which have been established are:

Irvine New Town, the only British New Town with a seaside frontage, was designated in 1966 and covers 12,480 acres. Its population at designation was 34,600, and the target for the late 1980's is 120,000. It is situated on the Firth of Clyde some 30 miles south west of Glasgow and incorporated the Ancient Burghs of Irvine and Kilwinning and a number of smaller communities. Since local government reorganization in 1975, it has been the headquarters of Cunninghame District Council.

By mid-1976, the Corporation had built over 2,300 houses for rent, almost 800 for sale. During peak periods the total housing output from all sources has exceeded 2,000 a year.

Industry has also been expanded in parallel with housing development. Compared with about 50 companies at the time of designation, the New Town by mid-1976 contained over 160 industrial concerns, including Swedish, Swiss, American, Canadian and Australian companies. Products include light and heavy engineering equipment, electrical and electronic components, textiles, clothing and carpets, chemicals, heavy goods vehicles and omnibuses, glass bottles, fork lift trucks, golf equipment, valves and bearings, optics, audio-visual and phonograph equipment and equipment for the oil and gas producing industry. A high proportion of the community is also engaged in the production of explosives, man-made fibres and a non-tobacco smoking mixture in peripheral factories.

In addition to almost 1 m sq. ft. of factories constructed, the Corporation also provided 1 m sq. ft. of industrial buildings for reconversion to heavy vehicle construction. In addition, a number of purpose-built factories have been constructed in the area.

Being an industrial centre located in the heart of a resort area of great scenic beauty, the New Town has considerable potential for the attraction of tourists. This is being developed not only as a seasonal tourist industry in itself, but to provide much higher amenities and recreation facilities for the permanent population than would normally be possible in the earlier stages of a New Town development.

The largest leisure Centre in Europe, costing in excess of £3 m, opened in June, 1976, contains swimming pools, skating and curling rinks, indoor bowling, a theatre/cinema/conference complex, and a complete range of facilities for indoor sports and pursuits of all kinds.

It is located in the heart of a 170 acre Beach Park, commenced in April, 1975, and due for completion in 1978. The adjoining Harbour area is being improved and largely re-built to expand its use as a marina.

At Kilwinning, the existing Eglinton Park is being expanded to create a 1,700-acre country park which will include facilities for sailing, pony trekking, nature trails, garden and carvan centre, as well as an additional three golf courses. Linear parks are being created along the banks of the five rivers which flow through the designated area.

In the commercial field, the Corporation completed in April, 1974, a shopping and office complex at Bridgegate. This provides 22,500 sq. ft. of shops and 32,000 sq. ft. of offices.

In late 1975 in partnership with Ravenseft and Murrayfield Scottish Investments Ltd., a new Town Centre was completed. This contains some 450,000 sq. ft. of shopping space, and a similar amount of office accommodation. The shopping complex is a totally enclosed thoroughfare, spanning the River Irvine, with a central mall and square, centrally heated and air conditioned. Landscaping with trees, shrubs and plants has been carried out extensively inside and around the building.

A complete new system of distributor and service roads for the whole area was substantially completed in 1975, and a new 7 mile by-pass to carry the main Greenock-Ayr trunk route was opened in March, 1976.

The development of bus-only "community routes" using many of the original country lanes and routes began in mid-1976 with the opening of the by-pass. These Community Routes are designed to provide a link between the new areas of high density housing and the industrial estates. Factories and houses are separated from each other by the new road system and are largely screened by landscaping and new earthworks.

When completed, Irvine will be the largest New Town in Scotland, both by population and acreage.

Livingston was established to create a new focus of industrial activity in the central belt of Scotland and thereby link the industrial west with centres of expansion in the Forth basin.

The site of Livingston, as designated in the New Town (Livingston) Designation Order 1962, made on 16th April 1962, comprises an area of 6,692 acres lying in the parishes of Uphall, Livingston and Bathgate in the District of West Lothian and including the existing villages of Livingston and Livingston Station, and in the parish of Midcalder. The target population is 70,000 by 1985 rising to 100,000 by the end of the century.

The site situated some 15 miles west of Edinburgh and 29 miles east of Glasgow, on the main trunk road (M8) linking the two cities, is undulating from the central feature of Dechmont Law in the north, through the valley of the River Almond to the slightly rising ground to the south and lies in the centre of an area of some 10 square miles, the rehabilitation of which has been the subject of a report, "The Lothians Regional Survey and Plan".

At the end of June 1976 the population had risen from 2,000 to about 26,000. More than 80 new industries were operating.

Letchworth Garden City Corporation was constituted as a public authority under the Letchworth Garden City Corporation Act 1962 and on 1 January 1963 acquired the Letchworth estate of First Garden City Ltd., the company which founded the town.

The objects of the Corporation are to manage, develop and extend the undertaking as a public service and the Act provides all powers necessary to enable it to carry out these and any purposes incidental thereto.

The Letchworth Urban District Council promoted the Bill which resulted in the 1962 Act and the Corporation has the power to precept on the Council (now the North Hertfordshire District Council) in any year in which the defined expenditure exceeds the revenues of the Corporation. (Defined expenditure includes any working, establishment or maintenance expenses, interest on borrowed money and provision for the repayment of borrowed money.) Conversely, future surplus revenues must be used for the benefit of Letchworth or for any purpose which the Corporation may deem to be a requisite public service.

Letchworth, as the first garden city of this country, was founded in 1903 by a registered public company known as First Garden City Limited and was developed pursuant to principles laid down by Sir Ebenezer Howard. It was a pioneer experiment in the marriage of town and country, industry and agriculture and its example has been followed in the New Towns. The vesting of the garden city estate at Letchworth in a statutory corporation established an unusual, if not unique, situation in that the estate is managed as a public service on behalf of the community.

The freehold estate comprises some 4,348 acres of land. Some 2,500 acres form an agricultural belt surrounding the built-up area and of this 1,850 acres are farmed direct by the Corporation.

The built-up area has been developed over the 70 years of its existence for residential, industrial, commercial and other uses. There are at present some 3,900 ground rent leases and the Corporation owns over 325 industrial, commercial and residential premises.

Current developments include a partnership agreement with Wates Ltd. for the development of approximately 100 acres of land to produce some 700 homes for sale and in conjunction with the Laing Development Co. Ltd., the Corporation has recently developed as a pedestrian shopping precinct a 6½-acre site in the town centre, and the erection of extensions to factory premises.

The Corporation has a management scheme under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967.

Letchworth Garden City Electrical Installations, a department of the Corporation, is one of the foremost electrical contractors in Hertfordshire and neighbouring counties.

Subsidiary to the Corporation is Letchworth Cottages and Buildings Limited, a charitable housing society, which owns nearly 300 cottages, flats and garages.

THAMESMEAD: Although not a New Town within the meaning of the New Towns Acts, the magnitude of Thamesmead merits its inclusion in the Section.

The Greater London Council is developing a site of 1,500 acres in the London Boroughs of Bexley and Greenwich to rehouse up to 50,000 Londoners by the 1990s.

The first two areas, 2,741 dwellings, are now virtually complete, and work in a number of other areas is well advanced. In spite of the current economic crisis, every opportunity is being taken to increase the production of homes, including the design and construction of the infrastructure necessary to bring new housing areas into use.

REORGANIZATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN SCOTLAND

In a White Paper (Cmnd 4583) published in February 1971 the Government set out its proposals (based on the recommendations of a Royal Commission (under the chairmanship of Lord Wheatley) which forms the basis of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973. The Act came into force on 16th May, 1975.

The numbers and types of local authorities in Scotland were:

County Councils	33
City and Burgh Councils	201
District Councils	197

These councils were abolished and reorganization resulted in the creation of:

1. Regional Authorities. Nine regional councils were established with executive powers and resources for dealing with strategic planning including the use of resources, transportation and roads, industrial development, police, fire, education and social work.

Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles, because of their separate identity and remoteness from the mainland, became virtually all-purpose authorities.

2. District Councils. Fifty-three district councils were established which are responsible for local planning, housing, local health and amenity services and building control.

The regional authorities in the Highlands, the Borders and the South-West are to be responsible for public libraries, but elsewhere the districts will undertake this function.

3. Community Councils. Any community which wishes to set up a community council will, with the approval of the Secretary of State, be enabled to do so. Such councils will, however, be optional and will not have statutory functions.

Election of Councillors

Ordinary elections of councillors will take place on the first Tuesday in May.

Elections for regional, islands and district councils took place on 7th May 1974 the second elections will be held in 1977 and the third in 1980; thereafter such election will take place every fourth year.

The term of office of district councillors will be:
  for those elected in 1974 and 1977, three years, and for those elected in 1980 and later, four years.

Each council consists of a chairman and councillors. The title of Lord Provost will attach to the chairman of each of the district councils of the Cities of Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh and Glasgow.

Commission for Accounts

A body to be known as the Commission for Local Authority Accounts in Scotland is to be set up, the members of which will be appointed by the Secretary of State. The functions of the Commission will be to secure the auditing of all accounts of local authorities; considering all reports on and investigating such matters and making recommendations to the Secretary of State, also advising the Secretary of State on matters relating to the accounting of local authorities which he may refer to them for advice.

Prevention of River Pollution

River purification boards established under the Rivers (Prevention of Pollution) (Scotland) Acts 1951 and 1965 were abolished.

The Secretary of State will, by order, divide Scotland into areas to be known as river purification board areas for each of which a board will be established.

Members of a board will be appointed as to one third from among their own members by regional councils within the area, one third similarly by district councils and one third by the Secretary of State.

The Greater Glasgow Passenger Transport Authority

This Authority was abolished and its property and functions transferred to the Strathclyde Regional Council.

Water

Regional water boards established under the Water (Scotland) Act 1967 were abolished and their functions transferred, with minor exceptions, to water authorities which are the regional or islands councils of the respective areas.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT (SCOTLAND) ACT 1975

*Joint function with Lothian Region.

Parliamentary Constituencies (3): Roxburgh, Selkirk and Peebles, Berwick and East Lothian (part), Midlothian (part).

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:
the county of Berwick;
the county of Peebles;
the county of Roxburgh;
the county of Selkirk;
in the county of Midlothian:
  the electoral division of Heriot and Stow.

In contrast to other Regions in Scotland, the Borders Region contains no city or major town to serve as a magnet for its shopping, administrative, employment or cultural functions. The 1971 population of the Region was 98,500, and within the entire region there are only ten settlements exceeding 1,500 population and containing 58% of the Regional population, leaving some 40,000 persons living in the landward area. The economy is based largely on high-quality textiles and agriculture, but for many years the Region's vitality has been sapped by depopulation, particularly of the younger and better educated. Some 10,000 people left the Region between 1951 and 1971, but in contrast to the fifties and sixties, jobs have become available in the last few years for incoming workers. Housing has become the key issue in the Region's development, and despite recent improvements in the number of available properties, the owner occupier sector has suffered fierce competition from retired couples, second home-owners and, in Peebles particularly, Edinburgh commuters. There is no shortage of land with planning permission for housing, and last year work began on the Region's largest single development at Tweedbank which will contain up to 1,000 S.S.H.A. houses, as well as 30 acres set aside for industrial development. In parts of the Region, particularly in the Ettrick and Yarrow valleys, forestry now stands alongside farming as a major land use. In the last ten years the substantial Forestry Commission holdings have been supplemented by an increasing proportion of land planted and managed by commercial forestry groups, with significant implications for future employment prospects, subsidiary industries and recreation (the last-named a large relatively untapped resource).

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:
the county of Clackmannan;
in the county of Perth:
  the burghs of Callander, Doune, Dunblane; the Western district (except the electoral division of Ardoch); the parish of Muckhart;

The region, which reaches from the industrial growth area of the Forth Valley to Loch Lomond in the west and Tyndrum in the north, already has a rich mixture of industry—petro-chemicals, dyestuffs, engineering, castings, distilling, brewing, glassware, electronics, textiles and paper manufacturing to name a few, and more new industries are eager to join us—an extensive and prosperous agricultural hinterland, and a rapidly growing conference and tourist business. This is backed by an infrastructure of port, road, rail and air communications, modern housing and community services including social, educational, cultural and recreational facilities, and Scotland's most modern university.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

the county of Dumfries;
the county of Kirkcudbright;
the county of Wigtown.

The region covers an area of 2,460 square miles (637,006 hectares) and is comparatively sparsely populated. Within its boundaries it contains almost every type of scenery normally associated with Scotland, from the hills and moors of the 250-square-mile Glen Trool National Park to the 200 miles of coastline indented by estuaries and bays. Sixty per cent of the area is mountainous moorland and the population lives mainly in the coastal plain and the river valleys. The Glasgow–Carlisle trunk road, A74, the most important road link between Scotland and England, skirts the eastern fringe of the region and from it, across the breadth of the region, runs the Gretna–Stranraer A75 trunk road. This road passes through the centres of population of Annan, Dumfries, Castle Douglas, Gatehouse of Fleet and Newton Stewart to end at Stranraer, the port for the shortest sea route to Ireland, and is an important link between Europe and Ireland. Most other centres lie within 15 miles of the A75 but although it is estimated that 95% of the total population lives within this communication corridor there is, nevertheless, a good network of principal and lesser roads serving the whole region. The climate is the mildest in Scotland and in the west, where sub-tropical plants can be seen in some gardens; the mean monthly temperatures are the same as in Cornwall.

Dumfries and Galloway has been lived in since prehistory and the region is rich in archaeological, historic and literary associations. Earthworks, standing stones, peel towers, castles, abbeys, monuments and memorials abound, bearing witness to a past often turbulent and stormy. The region, however, does not cater only for those interested in history. The countryside and seaside are relatively unspoiled and the visitor in his different capacities is well looked after. There is plenty of good accommodation. There are caravan and camping sites and there is ample room throughout the region for sport and recreation of all sorts.

Agriculture is the most important single industry in the region and agriculture and forestry occupy most of the land area. There is, however, a wide and varied range of manufacturing industries and much of the population is employed in service industries. The percentage of unemployed is high although the actual figure is small. The whole region is a Development Area and therefore eligible for the full range of financial incentives for industry and assistance in training of labour. A small part of the region is a special Development Area. There are sites available and many industries have opened up branch factories in the region and some have moved to the region in their entirety. Probably all have been influenced by the lack of congestion in the region, including the relatively light traffic on the roads, the scenery and the easy access to recreational activities, the coast and the countryside. The attractions for industry and tourism are much the same and grants and loans are available for new hotel accommodation and for specific tourist projects.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the area of the county of Fife which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

Fife Region is a peninsula in the east of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Firth of Tay, on the east by the North Sea, on the south by the Firth of Forth and on the west by the Central and Tayside Regions. It is a region with a long, varied coastline and a generally undulating relief which is punctuated by the Lomond Hills and the broad plain of the Howe of Fife. The area of about 500 square miles is divided into three districts—Dunfermline, Kirkcaldy and North East Fife. Glenrothes New Town, separately administered by a Development Corporation, is located in the north of the Kirkcaldy District.

At one time, Fife's economy was dominated by coal-mining, but in recent years industry has diversified and coal is not so important as formerly. Among the newer industries are electronics, light and marine engineering, metal fabrication and chemicals sectors. In the last ten years growth, as a result of electronics and North Sea oil, has helped to produce a more balanced economy. Agriculture is most important in the Howe of Fife and on the fringes of the Firth of Forth.

Fife has many historical associations. At Tentsmuir is the site of the earliest evidence of man's residence in Scotland. Dunfermline was the burial place of eight Scottish kings, including Malcolm Canmore (1093) and Robert the Bruce (1329) and the birthplace of the industrialist/philanthropist, Andrew Carnegie. Kirkcaldy was the birthplace of the economist, Adam Smith, while the Palace at Falkland was a favourite home of Scottish kings. St. Andrews has been the ecclesiastical centre of Scotland, the seat of Scotland's oldest University (1411) and has the most famous Golf Course in the world, where the Royal and Ancient Golf Club was founded in 1754.

the county of Banff;
the county of Moray (except the burgh of Grantown-on-Spey; the district of Cromdale).

The Grampian region comprises an area of widely differing topography and scenery, ranging as it does from the high granite plateaux of the Cairngorms to the fertile coastal plains of Moray, Banff and the Mearns.

Considerable climatic variation exists in the region, which varies in altitude from sea level to over 4,000 ft., and generalization is impossible. Rainfall varies from about 60 inches in the highland areas to approximately 25 inches on the coastal areas of the Moray Firth. Winter snows on the Cairngorms can persist until May and June, a fact of importance to the expanding winter sports industry. Temperature variations at Aberdeen range from an average mean minimum of −2°C (28·6°F) to an average mean maximum of 17°C (62·8°F).

The region's industry is broadly based and includes agriculture, fishing, food processing, malt whisky distilling, papermaking, textiles, boat-building, marine and general engineering.

In addition, in recent years, the ports of Aberdeen and Peterhead have become important centres for the administration, service and supply of Britain's offshore oil industry, a fact which has far-reaching implications for the prosperity of the region.

Aberdeen is the administrative capital of the region and houses the University (founded 1494), Technical Colleges and Research Institutes in addition to being the main centre for medical, distributive and professional services.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,000.

Parliamentary Constituency: Orkney and Zetland.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the area of the County of Orkney which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975.

The Orkney Islands lie on latitude 59 degrees north and are the second most northerly group of islands in the United Kingdom, being separated from the Scottish Mainland by a seven-mile stretch of the Pentland Firth. There are three main groupings, the north isles, south isles and the largest island known as the mainland. There are two towns, Kirkwall, the capital and administrative centre, and Stromness.

The islands are rich in historical interest and archaeological sites and many of these are of significance in the National and, in fact, European context. Best known are the chambered cairn of Maeshowe dating from 2,000 B.C., the stone-age village of Skara Brae and the magnificent St. Magnus Cathedral which is owned by the people of Kirkwall as a result of a Royal Charter in 1486.

The predominant industry in the county is agriculture, with the principal production of beef stock and dairy products, which include Orkney butter and cheese. There is also a local bacon factory. Other vital industries to the community are fishing, which is one of the growth industries, boat-building, tourism, distilling, knitwear and crafts.

Educationally, the islands are well served with primary schools in all the main areas and full secondary education provided in Kirkwall and Stromness. Medical services include a full range of hospital facilities in Kirkwall and doctors and district nurses covering the principal centres of population. An air ambulance service to Aberdeen is also in operation.

Recreational facilities include two eighteen-hole golf courses, free loch fishing, sea angling, tennis, badminton, squash, sailing, swimming, football, rugby, etc. There are two indoor swimming baths and first-class indoor sports facilities in Kirkwall. There are local clubs participating in sub-aqua, motor cycling and scrambling. For the less athletic, there are opportunities for nature study and ornithology, an excellent library system and the islands' only cinema, which is in Kirkwall.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,000.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

the county of the city of Glasgow;
the county of Bute;
the county of Dunbarton;
the county of Lanark;
the county of Renfrew;
the county of Argyll (except the district of Ardnamurchan; the electoral divisions of Ballachulish and Kinlochleven);
the county of Ayr;
in the county of Stirling—
  the burgh of Kilsyth; Western No. 3 district; the electoral division of Kilsyth West; the polling district of Kilsyth East (Banton).

Strathclyde Region was established under the terms of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973. The region encompasses a land area of 5,348 square miles extending from the mountains of Glencoe in the north to the lowland farming areas of Ayrshire in the south, and from the isles of Mull, Coll, Bute, Arran and Tiree in the west to the mining areas of Lanark in the east. The most heavily populated district is Glasgow with its ring of satellite towns and which can be claimed was the axis and melting pot of the industrial revolution in Scotland. The region has a population of 2,504,909 people, which is almost half the population of Scotland. The main industries are diverse, including light and heavy engineering, oil-related services, ship-building and repairs and the production of consumer goods. Glasgow and the west central belt is also the hub of commercial activity, providing banking, insurance and communications services coupled with a growing network of Government agencies. The Strathclyde Regional Council is responsible for such services as schools, social work, police, fire, roads and streets, road safety, public transport, water, sewerage, industry, regional planning, regional parks and tourism, museums and galleries, sport and recreation, consumer protection and the registration of births, deaths and marriages.

Scottish District Councils: Rating Statistics 1976/77

The information below is the first set of figures from the new local authorities in Scotland for a financial year running from 1st April to 31st March, since the authorities were re-organised in Scotland from 16th May, 1975.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Dunbarton—the burghs of Bearsden, Milngavie; that part of the electoral division of Hardgate lying within the parish of New Kilpatrick.

The Council's jurisdiction covers a compact area lying generally 6 to 12 miles north-west of the City of Glasgow. It will take over two well-established burghs, mainly residential in character, but with a sizeable amount of light industry, principally in the Milngavie area. The landward part is sparsely populated but covers about half the acreage of the district and takes in a major industrial development at Douglas Muir Quarry and a major switching station of the South of Scotland Electricity and North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Boards. Recreationally the district includes seven golf courses, with a further course and leisure complex planned by private developers at Dougalston, Milngavie. A major swimming pool/sports complex at Burnbrae, Bearsden, inherited from the former local authorities is nearing completion. There are also private football, rugby, cricket and tennis clubs.

Historically, the district coincides with the ancient parish of New Kilpatrick. Perhaps the main historical relics are the sections of the Roman Antonine Wall, which may be traced at New Kilpatrick cemetery. Recent excavations have uncovered the remains of a Roman bath-house in the grounds of a demolished villa in the aptly named Roman Road, Bearsden. This is now regarded as the major antiquarian find made in Scotland over very many years.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:

in the county of Ayr—the burghs of Ardrossan, Irvine, Kilwinning, Largs, Saltcoats, Stevenston; the districts of Irvine, Kilbirnie, West Kilbride; those parts of the designated area of Irvine New Town within the Ayr and Kilmarnock districts; in the county of Bute—the burgh of Millport; the districts of Arran, Cumbrae.

Cunninghame District includes the designated area of Irvine New Town (Britain's only New Town by the sea) which is planned to grow from its present population of 49,000 to a population of 120,000. It also contains the Hunterston area which is marked by a unique combination of very deep water with good marine approaches in the immediate vicinity of flat land and which is being developed as a major marine terminal for iron ore; for the making and finishing of iron and steel; and for the construction of exploration and production platforms for the North Sea Oil industry. It also contains the North Ayrshire coast and the islands of Cumbrae and Arran, all of which together comprise one of the most important tourist areas of Scotland.

These and other features present the District Council with major problems, but also with major opportunities for the worthwhile exercise of their planning, housing, leisure and recreation and other statutory functions which the District Council intends to seize and use to the full.

Parliamentary Constituency: Dumbarton West.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Dunbarton—the burghs of Dumbarton, Cove and Kilcreggan, Helensburgh; the districts of Helensburgh, Vale of Leven; the electoral divisions of Bowling, Dunbarton.

Dumbarton is situated on the north bank of the Clyde, 15 miles from Glasgow. It has a population of over 25,000. The town has excellent transport to Glasgow either by electric "blue" or by dual carriageway road, the A82, which is also the road to the west, Loch Lomond and the Highlands. Dumbarton is a busy town and although ship-building ceased in 1964 Dumbarton met the challenge of the situation and to-day provides a variety of industry which does not detract from its character as the county town. Dumbarton has redeveloped the old town centre and a pleasant shopping precinct has been provided. Over 2,000 houses have been built on estates on the perimeter of the town and new modern schools have been provided. Dumbarton has the advantage of being situated in an area of outstanding scenic beauty and provides urban and rural amenities which make it a most attractive town in which to live and work.

Located on the north side of the Clyde Estuary approximately 8 miles from Dumbarton and 23 miles from Glasgow, Helensburgh is a small and attractive seaside town with a population of some 14,000 persons.

In addition to acting as a resident area for commuters to the Glasgow area, Helensburgh also serves as a tourism and recreation centre. An 18-hole golf course is one of the many attractions of the town, as is the proximity of Loch Lomond and other equally beautiful locations which offer the residents of Helensburgh unlimited opportunities for the enjoyment of the countryside.

The town itself has a distinctive grid-iron street layout incorporating a fine town square which forms part of the busy commercial centre. A wide variety of high-quality old and new buildings interspersed with pleasant town parks and open spaces are found throughout the town.

The burgh of Cove and Kilcreggan, which for so long has appeared to the visitor to be a sleepy, pleasant western outpost to Dunbarton County has, in recent years, begun to stir. More and more people appear to have realized the possibility of commuter travel from this area to the industrial and commercial centres farther up the river. There is a steamer service at Kilcreggan which ensures easy access to the area by sea as well as by road.

Alexandria is the central township of the five original settlements of Renton, Alexandria, Balloch, Jamestown and Bonhill, which over the past 200 years have coalesced into one elongated urban area extending for about 2½ miles along both sides of the River Leven. The Burgh of Dumbarton lies 3½ miles to the south of Alexandria, and Balloch, on the southern shore of Loch Lomond, is situated 1 mile to the north.

In its capacity as district centre for the Vale of Leven Area, Alexandria provides the main shopping facilities for the 25,000 resident population of the catchment area. Two major roads presently converge in the centre of the town—the Glasgow–Inverness Trunk Road, Route A82 (which will shortly be diverted to the west of the town by means of a by-pass), and Route A812 which leads from Dumbarton through Renton along the east side of the River Leven.

An extensive programme of redevelopment has been undertaken by the local authority during the past 15 years to secure the replacement of many of the older sub-standard properties throughout the Vale of Leven area and further such improvement schemes are planned. Alexandria in particular has been the subject of comprehensive redevelopment projects which has considerably improved the environment of the town and the first phase of the new traffic-free shopping centre is now nearing completion.

Dundee is one of the four large cities in Scotland, and second in importance in respect of commerce. The town is well built, of handsome appearance, with wide streets, and has a grand two-mile esplanade, commodious docks and shipbuilding yards, large engineering works, flax, jute, plastic and brick factories; also preserve, canning and confectionery works. Dundee is remarkable for its educational institutions, which now include a University, also ancient and modern architecture and ornamental parks. Within the boundaries of the district there are 30 parks and open spaces, the total area amounting to 4,300 acres. The Mills Observatory, an up-to-date observatory, has been erected on Balgay Hill and is open to the public. The Council takes part in the administration of the Charities, appoints a harbour trustee, representatives to the Dundee College of Education, etc., maintains markets, slaughter-houses, public baths, washhouses, dispensary, parks and cemeteries, public libraries, art and sculpture galleries, museums and housing estates.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Renfrew—
  the burghs of Gourock, Greenock, Port Glasgow;
  the Fifth district.

The Headquarters of the district are in the Parliamentary Burgh of Greenock. Greenock was elevated to a Burgh of Barony in 1635 and its first magistrates and council were elected in 1751. The foundation stone of the present municipal buildings was laid in 1881. These buildings are an excellent example of the re-discovery of classical taste in the late Victorian era and are well worth a visit, particularly the very fine ceremonial interior of the Council Chambers. There are many fine views and in particular the one from the Cross of Lorraine Memorial (erected by the French authorities to the seamen of France who gave their lives in the Battle of the Atlantic) on the Lyle Hill is possibly the finest in the West of Scotland. The redevelopment of the town centre began in 1967 and work is still in progress. The chief industries are shipbuilding, engineering, sugar refining, worsted and woollen manufacturing and electronics. Industry, it is confidently forecast, will be attracted to the new industrial estates in the east and adjoining the waterfront and Larkfield which overlooks the Clyde estuary.

Port Glasgow, the second largest burgh population-wise, occupies a pleasant situation on the south bank of the River Clyde where it widens to form the Estuary. The famous shipping channel of the river opposite the town has seen maritime giants such as the three Queens. The principal industries are shipbuilding, the manufacture of textiles, canvas and clothing.

Gourock, the smallest burgh, is a popular seaside resort situated on the Firth of Clyde. It has a first-class eighteen-hole golf course, also an excellent heated open-air swimming pool with accommodation for both sexes. Ash tennis courts, bowling greens, putting greens and a novelty golf course have been laid out.

There are three villages in the district—Inverkip, Wemyss Bay and Kilmacolm. Inverkip has recently seen much private and council house development and there are plans for further building. The Kip marina lies opposite the village and has proved to be very popular with the sailing fraternity. Between Inverkip and Wemyss Bay a South of Scotland Electricity Board Generating Power Station is being built, the tower of which on completion will reach a height of 236 metres from ground level. Wemyss Bay is a residential village. It is from the pier here that a ferry service runs to Rothesay on the Island of Bute and workers are transported to the oil platform construction site at Ardyne. Kilmalcolm is a high-quality residential area situated in impressive countryside.

Murshiel Regional Park is in the district; here there are information trails, picnic areas and various other amenities.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,500.

Parliamentary Constituency: Kilmarnock.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:

in the county of Ayr—
the burghs of Darvel, Galston, Kilmarnock, Newmilns and Greenholm, Stewarton; the district of Kilmarnock (except that part of the designated area of Irvine New Town within this district).

The largest of the towns in the Kilmarnock and Loudoun District, Kilmarnock is one of the most important industrial towns in the West of Scotland. It is the commercial and industrial capital of Ayrshire and is notable for the variety of industries carried on within its boundaries. These include heavy and light engineering, carpet-making, whisky blending and bottling, shoemaking, knitwear and agricultural machinery and sanitary ware. There are several industrial estates with factories and sites available.

The District Council maintains throughout its area some twelve parks and recreation grounds, a public library, museum and art gallery. There are two golf courses, pitch and putt courses, putting and bowling greens, a leisure centre, public baths, sauna and indoor swimming pool in Kilmarnock owned and operated by the District Council. There are several homes for old people and day nurseries for children. A modern abattoir has been recently opened. A suite of halls is owned by the Council in Kilmarnock, and a well-equipped theatre is administered by the local Arts Guild. In education, the District Council is well served by a number of modern schools and a new technical college.

To the east of Kilmarnock is the village of Hurlford and the towns of Galston, Newmilns and Darvel all situated on the banks of the River Irvine. Hurlford has its own industries which include shirt-making, iron-founding and the manufacture of fireclay products. Galston's industrial activities are knitwear, lace- and blacket-making, meat canning and some light engineering. There are good recreational facilities in the town and an excellent golf course in the parkland of Loudoun Castle.

Newmilns, along with Darvel, is the centre of Scotland's lace and madras industry. Recently established are light engineering works and a ceramics factory. Darvel pioneered the lace industry in Scotland and has now largely departed from the use of more traditional materials in favour of terylene and similar man-made fibres. Historically, Darvel has associations with the Covenanters and more recently with the discovery of penicillin through its famous native son Sir Alexander Fleming.

To the north-west of Kilmarnock is Crosshouse, a small industrial community with a tradition of knitwear, agricultural machinery, fireclay and timber goods.

The village of Kilmaurs a few miles north from Kilmarnock is a sixteenth-century village with its town gaol still standing in the main street. Attractively set in rich farmland, it has a large creamery and milk-processing plant, and knitwear factories.

Some miles further north is the town of Stewarton. Historically associated with Macbeth and Malcolm and later as "Covenanting" territory, Stewarton is now a pleasant and busy town well known for its textile products. There are spinners, dyers and weavers making yarns for the carpet trade, and also a thriving hosiery industry, famous for the production of "Scotch" or Stewarton Bonnets. Egg-packing and frozen-food processing has been recently established and a busy cooperage carries out the repairing of whisky casks. Two firms of precision engineers turn out parts for industries all over Britain.

Almost at the northern limit of the district is the attractive village of Dunlop where there are timber works, carpet-yarn spinning and the manufacture of cattle feeding-stuffs.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,000.

Kincardine and Deeside is the largest district in area and smallest in population in the Grampian Region. The district is partly agricultural and partly moorland and mountains with substantial areas of natural beauty. It includes Royal Deeside and attracts large numbers of tourists from Britain and overseas each year. The River Dee (the major part of which is within the district) is a noted salmon-fishing river.

Parliamentary Constituencies (3); Kirkcaldy, Central Fife, East Fife (part).

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Fife—

the burghs of Buckhaven and Methil, Burntisland, Kinghorn, Kirkcaldy, Leslie, Leven, Markinch; the districts of Glenrothes, Kirkcaldy (except that part of the electoral division of Auchtertool within the Gray Park polling district), Wemyss; the electoral divisions of Auchterderran, Denend, Kinglassie, New Carden.

Kirkcaldy District is situated on the south coast of Fife, and stretches from Burntisland in the west to Leven in the east. From the coast the District stretches inland to include Leslie, the New Town of Glenrothes and Markinch. The main centres of population are Kirkcaldy, Glenrothes, Buckhaven and Methil, and Leven, and these urban areas form a triangle which takes up the majority of the land area of the District. The remainder of the District is predominantly rural in character, except the Cardenden/Auchterderran area which is mainly concerned with coal extraction. The main Edinburgh to Aberdeen railway line bisects the District with stations at Burntisland, Kinghorn, Kirkcaldy and Markinch.

Throughout the southern and western parts of the District the coal mining industry has left many remains which are gradually being removed or rehabilitated. Over the years the industry in the District has been diversifying away from the previously dominant coal and linoleum industries, and Glenrothes is now a major centre of the electronics industry. There is considerable involvement in the North Sea Oil industry within the District, the two main examples being the Redpath Dorman Long platform yard at Methil, and the Caledonian Platform Structures Ltd. yard at Burntisland. Methil, Kirkcaldy and Burntisland all have commercial ports, while there is a small airfield at Glenrothes.

The District has also proved to be a popular tourist area, with main centres at Burntisland, Kinghorn and Leven. Facilities for tourists are mainly located along the coast, and include caravan sites and golf courses.

Kirkcaldy is the main shopping centre, not only for the District, but also for the Region as a whole, and has a wide range of department and specialist stores. Plans to pedestrianize the main shopping street are seen as enhancing this present popularity.

Chairman's annual allowance: £2,000.

Baths and Pools: 1; Car Parks: 5; Cemeteries: 33; Council Houses and Flats: 10,000; Library: 1; Parks and Open Spaces: 3.

Parliamentary Constituency: Lanark.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:

in the county of Lanark—

the burghs of Biggar, Lanark; the First, Second, Third district.

Lanark District extends from the village of Law in the north to Beattock in the south and from Dolphinton in the east to Stonehouse in the west. The greater part of the District is of a rural character and there is extensive sheep grazing in the south where the land is in the nature of 1,000 feet above sea level. The upper waters of the Clyde run through the area and in the valley from Lanark to Crossford intensive fruit cultivation is carried out. The principal towns are Lanark, Biggar, Carluke and Lesmahagow, and in all of these, as also in Douglas and Forth, various light industries are located. A limited amount of coal mining is still carried out, but not so extensively as pre-war. Sand and gravel extraction is worked fairly extensively in the proximity of Carstairs and Carnwath. The M74 and A74 run through the District and Carstairs is an important British Rail junction. Lanark has a weekly auction market which is one of the largest in the country, and is noted for its annual Lanimer Week. There are several conservation areas and the Pentland Hills, part of which lie within the District, form an area of special planning control.

Baths and Pools: 2; Cemeteries: 17; Council Houses and Flats: 12,880; Libraries: Central: 1 (non-lending); Branch: 8; Parks and Open Spaces; 80.

Parliamentary Constituency: Midlothian.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:

in the county of Midlothian—
 the burghs of Bonnyrigg and Lasswade, Dalkeith, Loanhead, Penicuik; the districts of Gala Water (except the electoral division of Heriot and Stow), Lasswade, Musselburgh (except the parish of Inveresk), Newbattle, Penicuik.

Midlothian County Council was, heraldically, the Premier County of Scotland, and while historically overshadowed by Edinburgh, the numerous castles—Borthwick, Crichton, Dalhousie and Hawthornden, for example—point to the troublesome times of bygone days. Also within the district's boundaries are Dalkeith Palace, Newbattle Abbey and Rosslyn Chapel.

Geographically, the new district lies between the Pentland Hills and the Moorfoots on the west and south, Edinburgh to the north, with the agricultural lands of East Lothian stretching out to the east and the River Esk running through the centre.

It has been projected that in the Esk Valley—the area of the district—there will be a population increase of 34,000 in the next twenty years and that it will be necessary to provide employment for 12,000 to 15,000 persons. Midlothian County Council had taken action to deal with this by seeking permission from the Secretary of State for Scotland to re-zone 555 acres of land for residential and ancillary development, public open space, and industrial and commercial development.

The principal industries of the area were, at one time, coal mining and paper making and both have in recent years contracted, the latter to a more substantial degree than the former. There remain four collieries, two of them, Bilston Glen and Monktonhall, being among the most modern in the country and each producing over 1,000,000 tons of coal annually. In recent years a diversity of new industry has been attracted to the six industrial estates and other individual locations. These include precision engineering, electronics, crystal glass manufacture, computer programming, etc., printing, stationery manufacture, photo processing and whisky bottling and blending.

There is also a diversity of amenities with three golf courses, two indoor swimming pools, and excellent pony trekking and hill-walking facilities available.

Parliamentary Constituencies (2): Dumfriesshire (part), Galloway (part).

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Dumfries—the burghs of Dumfries, Sanquhar; the districts of Dumfries (except the parishes of Dalton, Lochmaben), Thornhill, Upper Nithsdale;
in the county of Kirkcudbright—
  the Eastern district.

The district takes its name from the River Nith which runs through much of the area. The name is a historic one for the lands of the Nith Valley. Not only the burghs mentioned below, but also many of the rural communities bear names which have a significant place in the history and development of Scotland throughout the ages.

Nithsdale district is predominantly an agricultural area. The population density is 102 persons per square mile. More than half the population live in the town of Dumfries and its vicinity. There are at this time (1974) two very old Royal Burghs in the area, Dumfries and Sanquhar. Dumfries, the largest town in South-west Scotland, is a market, administrative and commercial centre for much of Dumfries and Galloway. Much of the industrial development in the district is in the Dumfries area. The Sanquhar area in the north has diversified modern industries which have largely taken over the role of the mining industry. Throughout the district agriculture and forestry, and industries associated with or serving these, also provide substantial employment. The tourist industry, though still seasonal, is also a growing source of employment.

Chairman's annual allowance: £500.

PERTH AND KINROSS (Tayside)

Pop., 119,169; RV, £6,476,625; Debt, £35,521,686; Area, 1,294,080 Ac.

Parliamentary Constituencies (2): Perth and East Perthshire, Kinross and West Perthshire.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

the county of Kinross;

in the county of Angus—

the parish of Kettins;

in the county of Perth—

the burghs of Aberfeldy, Abernethy, Alyth, Auchterarder, Blairgowrie and Rattray, Coupar Angus, Crieff, Perth, Pitlochry; the districts Central (except the parish of Muckhart), Eastern, Highland, Perth (except the electoral division of Longforgan); the electoral division of Ardoch.

Historical. The City of Perth was the ancient capital of Scotland. The area has been the scene of much that is vital in Scotland's history from the distant days of the Roman occupation to the present-day development of hydro-electric power. The area contains the sites of many historic battles and is the home of one of the greatest of Scottish regiments, the Black Watch. There is much evidence of relics of the past—ruined castles, Pictish forts, Roman encampments—as well as castles, abbeys, churches and great houses still in use.

Geographical and Industrial features. The area extends to 2,022 square miles, the second largest district council area in Scotland. The area contains almost every type of scenery to make it a microcosm of Scotland. It has great mountains, rolling farmlands, beautiful lochs and rivers, wide, high moorlands, hills of heather and pine, woodlands and waterfalls. Through it runs the longest river in Scotland and unquestionably the finest and most varied scenically, namely, the River Tay, which has unrivalled salmon fishing in its lower regions. There are ample facilities for the sportsman, particularly in fishing and golf. Facilities for salmon- and trout-fishing are extensive and there are many fine golf courses, including Gleneagles Hotel course. Shooting facilities are extensive—there are 100,000 acres of deer forest alone and the grouse moors are among the best in Scotland. In the bigger centres there are ample facilities for tennis and bowls and the mountaineer has every type of terrain offering an endless variety ranging from the simple scramble; while in the winter ski-ing and curling are provided for all. There are two theatres, one at Perth and one at Pitlochry.

Industrial. The main industries of the area are agriculture, tourism, dyeing, glass and linen manufacture and whisky distilling.

Parliamentary Constituency (1): Roxburgh, Selkirk and Peebles.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Berwick—
  the parish of Nenthorn;
in the county of Roxburgh—

the burghs of Hawick, Jedburgh, Kelso; the districts of Hawick, Jedburgh, Kelso; that part of the parish of Roxburgh within the district of Melrose.

The district of Roxburgh is entirely inland with 75 miles of its eastern and southern boundaries forming part of the Border Line. The thirty-seven parishes come within the bounds and under the supervision of the Presbytery of Jedburgh.

The area is drained by the River Teviot and its tributaries joining the Tweed at Kelso, while the western confines depend on the Liddel Water flowing to the Solway. The type of terrain varies greatly from the high hills of the Cheviots to the pastoral slopes and fertile river valleys of Lower Teviotdale.

The geological history of Roxburgh ranges from the glacial gravels and boulder clays to the sandstones and shales of the Silurian period, with intrusions of igneous rocks protruding through the older sandstone deposits to produce an infinite variety of rocks and soils. The rough pastures of the higher hills are devoted to sheep and cattle farming, while afforestation, both by the Forestry Commission and private developers, continues to reduce hill-farm acreage. The lower grounds in the river valleys provide excellent arable and general-purpose farming for stock-feeds and market produce.

While agriculture is the predominant industry, the woollen trade figures largely in the district's economy, particularly in Hawick with its large knitwear and tweed factories. Light engineering and agricultural machinery, forestry and several other smaller labour-employing industries flourish throughout the district while industrial sites have been provided for in the larger centres to attract incoming firms and encourage expansion in existing ones.

Roxburgh is exceedingly rich in its historical associations from the earliest times, with traces and relics of the Roman, Saxon and Norman occupations, along with the Abbeys of Kelso and Jedburgh, and the many castles and peel towers scattered throughout the district.

All kinds of sports are catered for in the many public parks and recreation grounds with rugby football enjoying the greatest public support, while there are indoor swimming pools at Hawick, Jedburgh and Kelso, and a curling rink at the last named. There are five golf courses within the district as well as tennis courts in the larger centres and many bowling greens. Other available activities include hunting, pony trekking, fishing, hill-walking and climbing. On the cultural side, there are societies for the historically-minded, with art, photographic, music, drama and operatic societies all receiving good support.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,000.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Inverness—
  the district of Skye;
in the county of Ross and Cromarty—
  the South West district.

On 1st April 1976 part of Lochalsh District, comprising the Glenelg, Avnisdale and Barrisdale areas, was transferred to Skye and Lochalsh District following a boundary review.

Under Local Government reorganization, Skye and South West Ross were united to form Skye and Lochalsh district.

The area is of great scenic importance and is a favourite holiday haunt for tourists. Portree in Skye and Kyle of Lochalsh on the mainland are the main centres of population.

Skye and Lochalsh is a district, centring on forestry, fishing, tourism and, to a lesser extent, crofting. The Inverness–Kyle railway, is a line of great scenic value and attracts many tourists during the summer.

About a year ago the Royal Navy established a base in Kyle for the purpose of torpedo-testing in the Inner Sound of Raasay. This base is likely to be expanded over the next few years and will provide many opportunities of employment for local people.

The Island of Skye is a very popular rendezvous for visitors and during the particular months of July and August is usually bursting at the seams with all nationalities. Favourite recreations are hill walking, climbing, golfing and fishing. The area is steeped in history and several interesting castles, Pictish brochs, etc., can be visited.

The climate is mild, being influenced by the Gulf Stream, and although rainfall is higher than the national average rarely does snow affect communications.

Chairman's annual allowance: £300.

Art Gallery: 1; Cemeteries: 33; Council Houses and Flats: 2,327; Parks and Open Spaces: 14.

Parliamentary Constituency: Galloway.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

In the county of Kirkcudbright—

the burghs of Castle Douglas, Dalbeattie, Gatehouse of Fleet, Kirkcudbright, New Galloway; the districts of Castle Douglas, Dalbeattie, Glenkens, Kirkcudbright; the electoral division of Anwoth and Girthon.

The area of the Stewartry district council comprises the area of the present Stewartry of Kirkcudbright with the exception of two parishes in the west and five parishes in the east which are now in other districts.

The title of "Stewartry" dates from the fourteenth century, when Archibald the Grim received, in perpetual fee, all the Crown Lands in Galloway between the Rivers Nith and Cree and appointed a steward to collect his revenues and administer justice.

The wealth and prosperity of the district is derived mainly from agriculture and its ancillary industries, and from forestry and (to a lesser extent) from tourism and manufacturing industries.

The district enjoys many natural geographical advantages which are denied many parts of the United Kingdom, and areas of great scenic value, of great diversity, which could provide a complementary source of prosperity if carefully developed.

GOVERNMENT

Following the fall of the Northern Ireland Executive, appointed under the Northern Ireland Constitutional Act 1973, temporary provision was made by the Northern Ireland Act 1974 for the government of Northern Ireland to be exercised by the Secretary of State.

The Act also provided for the Dissolution of the existing Northern Ireland Assembly and for the election and holding of a Constitutional Convention in Northern Ireland.

The Northern Ireland Assembly was dissolved on 27th March 1975 and the election of 78 members to the Constitutional Convention took place on 1 May 1975.

The Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Lowry was appointed Chairman of the Convention.

The Convention which had the purpose of considering what provision for the government of Northern Ireland was likely to command the most widespread acceptance throughout the community there, reported on 8 November 1975.

The Convention was reconvened on 3 February 1976 so that it might be determined whether agreement could be reached on a specific and crucial issue of a system of government within Northern Ireland which provided for a form of partnership and participation.

No further report was made and the Convention was dissolved on 5 March 1976.

Direct Rule continues in being under the terms of the Northern Ireland Act 1974.

REORGANIZATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Local government in Ulster was similar in most respects to the system existing in England and Wales, the number of local authorities being:—

County Councils	6 (a)
County Boroughs	2 (b)
Boroughs	9
Urban Districts	25
Rural Districts	26

(a) One (Fermanagh) is an all-purposes authority.

(b) Londonderry was a Development Commission.

On 1st October 1973 these authorities were replaced by 26 District Councils and 9 Area Boards. In addition certain functions, previously the responsibility of local authorities, were transferred to government departments.

District council members are elected for a term of four years and the experiment of using proportional representation by means of a single transferable vote was introduced at the first elections.

The general statistics relating to the 26 District Councils are given below; a uniform Regional Rate of 48p in the £ for commercial ratings and 36p in the £ for domestic ratings is levied in each District in addition to the District Rate for 1976/77 quoted below.

Area Boards. There are nine area boards spanning the 26 new districts:

(b) 5 for education and public libraries, covering Belfast and the south-east having separate boards in Belfast, the North-eastern in Ballymena, the Western in Omagh, and the Southern in Armagh.

Membership of the boards varies from 24–36—thirty per cent of (a) and 40 per cent of (b) being district councillors. The other members are appointed by the Minister.

Each area for the health and personal social services is divided into a number of districts for local management of the services with an office in each district.

Other functions were transferred from local government to government departments, i.e.:

Planning, roads and water and sewerage services become the direct responsibility of the Ministry of Development and are administered through a chain of local offices.

Housing was already being carried out by the Housing Executive.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN THE ISLES

THE ISLE OF MAN

An island in the Irish Sea, in lat. 54° 3′–54° 25′ N, and long. 4° 18′–4° 47′ W, nearly equi-distant from England, Scotland and Ireland. The total land area is 141,062·97 acres (227 sq. miles), with an estimated population in 1975 of 58,773.

Agriculture 1975. Under crops 77,146 acres; Rough grazing 43,078 acres; Corn 371; Oats 3,291; Wheat 945; Barley 5,916; Turnips 1,592; Potatoes 755; Hay 13,807; Grass 48,176 acres.

Livestock. Horses 640; Cattle 43,159; Sheep 109,047; Pigs 3,927.

Workers (including self-employed). Agriculture and Fishing, 1,822; Manufacturing, 3,183; Building, 2,868; Public Utilities and Transport, 2,702; Wholesaling and Retailing, 4,148; Professional and Financial, 4,138; Tourist Accommodation, 3,774; Other, 4,653.

The Island's traditional industries are agriculture, fishing and tourism, which attracts about 400,000 holidaymakers each summer. Manufacturing industry, banking and other financial services have, however, recently become the most important contributors to the Manx economy.

The government provides a wide range of services including a national health service, social security benefits similar to those provided in the United Kingdom, education services, is responsible for roads, builds houses to rent and advances loans for house purchase. Loans and grants are also available to assist manufacturing industry, the tourist industry and the agriculture and fishing industries. Trading undertakings such as airports, harbours, electric railway, gas and electricity are controlled by the government.

Government. The Isle of Man is governed by a Legislature, called Tynwald, consisting of two branches—the Legislative Council and the House of Keys. The Council consists of the Lieutenant Governor, the Bishop of Sodor and Man, the Attorney General, and 8 members appointed by the House of Keys. The House of Keys (possibly from the Scandinavian keise = chosen) is one of the most ancient legislative assemblies in the world. It consists of 24 members, elected by the adult male and female population, 13 from the six sheadings, 7 from Douglas, 2 from Ramsey, and 1 each from Castletown and Peel. Bills after having passed both Houses are signed by the members, and then sent for the Royal Assent. After receiving the Royal Assent, a Bill does not become law unless promulgated within the ensuing twelve months, and on the first "Tynwald Day" (5th July) following it is announced in the English and Manx languages on the Tynwald Hill. On the promulgation taking place a certificate thereof is signed by the Governor and the Speaker of the House of Keys.

Finance. The main sources of taxation are customs and excise duties, social security taxes which are levied at the same rates as in the United Kingdom and income tax. The standard rate of income tax is 21·25%; personal allowances are usually higher than those given in the United Kingdom. No surtax is payable and no death duties are levied.

A property rate is levied to recover a proportion of government expenditure on education, highways, fire service and drainage and expenditure of local authorities.

ISLES OF SCILLY

Pop., 2,020; R.V., £281,670; Rate, 51p; Debt, £1,036,000.

The Council of the Isles of Scilly is administratively unique in the United Kingdom, having all the powers and duties of a County Council and a District Council. These are derived from Section 292 of the Local Government Act, 1933, all legislation being specifically applied to the Islands by Special Order. Education, Planning, Highways, Fire Services and Social Services are all administered by the Council and there are arrangements with Cornwall County Council for other services like libraries. The Devon and Cornwall Police Authority, of which the Council is a Constituent Member, administers the Police. The islands appoint one member to sit on the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Area Health Authority and one to the Family Practitioner Committee. These bodies meet in Cornwall. The Isles of Scilly have their own separate Community Health Council which meets and is administered on St. Mary's. There are at present four primary schools in use on the islands, a comprehensive school on St. Mary's together with a boarding hostel for children from the other islands who reside during the week. Pupils transfer to mainland establishments for sixth form and other further education. St. Mary's and Tresco are served by water and sewerage systems and the island of Bryher has a mains water supply. The 1972 Local Government Act not applying to the islands, the Council retains its four Aldermen in addition to whom there are 21 Councillors. The islands form part of the St. Ives Electoral Division.

There are five inhabited islands in the Area of the Council, the whole of which has been designated both as a Conservation Area and as an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The islands attract substantial tourist traffic which contributes fundamentally to their economy. The local flora and fauna are considered by the Nature Conservancy Council to be of National Nature Reserve Status. The extreme south-westerly maritime environment supports a unique natural history with a number of species of plants, animals and birds which do not occur on the mainland and others which occur only rarely. The wild life and geographical features of the area are protected by the Wardening Service of the Duchy of Cornwall with help and advice from the Nature Conservancy Council. All the uninhabited islands and large areas of those which are inhabited are scheduled as sites of Special Scientific Interest and are treated as sanctuaries. There are restrictions on entry to some areas in breeding seasons. On St. Mary's there is a small but distinguished Museum of Scillonian history, pre-history and natural history.

Digest of New Legislation

for relief from your legal headaches

In these days of instant and ever increasing legislation, the Digest of New Legislation published by the Municipal Journal is more than ever in demand. The busy local government officer may not have time to study every Act concerning his responsibilities and yet he must be fully informed.

Digest of New Legislation is the answer to the problem. Every Act of interest to local government is examined by one of our experienced legal consultants and the digest published normally within ten days from the publication of the Act.

Each Digest has the same headings and marginal notes as the Act, is legally correct and written in clear and concise English.

You probably know EDBRO as major manufacturers of tipping gear. So they are—in fact Britain's biggest. By far the largest percentage of tippers in operation in Britain today are EDBRO equipped.

That's the start of the story.

Many refuse handling vehicles depend on EDBRO hydraulic systems.

In tipper bodies, EDBRO provides a comprehensive service, constructing bodies in steel, alloys and timber for every type of vehicle. The EDBRO BUCKET LOADER has proved itself in the waste handling field, and the versatile DUO-LOADER has set new standards of operating efficiency in waste collection and disposal.

If it's bulk handling equipment or vehicle hydraulics—talk to EDBRO

LATE INFORMATION

SECTION 24—SALARIES AND RATES OF PAY

The Editor is grateful for the help given by the staff of the various Joint Negotiating Committees at 41, Belgrave Sq., London, with this late information to update salary scales printed earlier in Section 24 of the Year Book. These new scales below operate from the dates shown and are pay settlements made towards the end of the period of the £6 per week pay policy in July, 1976.

CHIEF EXECUTIVES (ENGLAND & WALES)

No amendments made at the annual review date of 1st July, 1976.

CHIEF OFFICERS (ENGLAND AND WALES)

For all Chief Officers (including Passenger Transport Managers) and deputy chief officers within the scope of this Joint Negotiating Committee, the salary scales calculated in accordance with the circular of 4th July, 1975 continue to be applicable. In addition to their salary as at 30th June, 1976, all officers shall receive a salary supplement as set out below:

Existing or Selected Salary	Salary Supplement
Up to £8,188 per annum	£312 per annum
£8,500 and above	Nil

The salary supplements set out in the paragraph above are payable to deputy chief officers, and it is recognised that the addition of this supplement may disturb their salary relativities with their chief officers.

It is intended that the agreement shall apply for 12 months from its operative date of 1st July, 1976.

PASSENGER TRANSPORT MANAGERS

For all Chief Officers (including Passenger Transport Managers) and deputy chief officers within the scope of this Joint Negotiating Committee, the salary scales calculated in accordance with the circular of 4th July, 1975 continue to be applicable. In addition to their salary as at 30th June, 1976, all officers shall receive a salary supplement as set out below:

Existing or Selected Salary	Salary Supplement
Up to £8,188 per annum	£312 per annum
£8,500 and above	Nil

It is intended that the agreement shall apply for 12 months from its operative date of 1st July, 1976.

NEW TOWNS

Agreement was reached in the Whitley Council on the improvements in remuneration to be operative from 1st July, 1976.

The settlement is within the terms of the Government's pay policy as set out in the White Paper "The Attack on Inflation" (Cmnd. 6151). It provides for the payment of a supplement of £312 per annum to all staff with the purview of the Whitley Council except that:

(a) pro-rata supplements shall be paid to part-time staff based on normal hours of work;
(b) officers aged 16 years shall be paid a supplement of £210 per annum, rising to £261 per annum with effect from their 17th birthday;
(c) officers aged 17 years shall be paid a supplement of £261 per annum, rising to £312 per annum with effect from their 18th birthday;
(d) the supplement shall not be paid to officers whose remuneration is £8,500 or more per annum or, if such payment would increase the officer's rate of remuneration beyond £8,500 per annum, such part only shall be paid as will increase his rate of remuneration to that amount.

The supplement is to be included for the purpose of calculating holiday pay, sickness pay and superannuation, but is to be excluded for the computation of overtime, bonus and other premium payments.

POLICE

At the time of going to press amendments were still under discussion for a supplement to figures appearing on an earlier page in Section 24.

"Let's decide this by a show of Handbooks"

When the Councillor's Handbook was first published in 1960 it was intended for the councillor new to local government. Before long however it was generally accepted as essential for all councillors new or experienced.

The current edition written by Professor J.D. Stewart, Associate Director of the Institute of Local Government Studies, University of Birmingham and John. K. Boynton, Chief Executive of Cheshire County Council is in constant demand.

Men and women seek election to local authorities for many different reasons. Some have political ambitions; some bring to bear business ability and professional skill; some are anxious to help the communities in which they live. Whatever the reason for election, the Councillor's Handbook will give an outline and guideline to the new councillor, and to the experienced, a greater awareness of the workings of his own authority.

The cost of the Councillor's Handbook is 75p per copy with bulk orders (40 or more) receiving 15% discount.
